Tea at Empress . . .

Taste of Freedom

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Tea at the Empress.

Small tables in the foyer. Large white linen cloths. Shiny silver service and big pots of tea, each spouting steamy wraiths of scent from India, China and Ceylon.

It's a 3 p.m. ritual, as fixed an event as the changing of the guard at Buckingham Palace or the tolling of Big Ben.

It is one of the better kept traditions of our colonial heritage. An oasis of gentle calm, an institution most Victorians, if they think about it at all, take for granted.

Over in the corner by the fireplace is a long table set for 25 people. At first glance it looks oddly out of place amidst the small individual tables and wingback chairs.

Almost all the places at the big table are taken. The people there sit upright and still and they speak softly.

Then you notice the wheelchairs. Thirteen of them.

Tea today at the Empress is for the crippled, the lame and the handicapped.

They do not take it for granted. They have looked forward to this event for days, weeks. For some of them, it is an event that frees them — if only for a few hours — from an institutional routine.

For a brief spell, they are part of the elegant atmosphere of one of Western Canada's most famous rituals.

Francis T. Jones, born in London in 1893, sits with his back to the big front windows. Nearby is his wife, Kate, her full grey hair carefully arranged, framing bright eyes that seem to look over his head from across the linen.

Beside her is Ontario-born Mrs. Susan Smith, who once stayed at the Empress more than 20 years ago.

All three now live at Memorial Pavilion, where they are well cared for, but where outings depend on friends with cars or sturdy arms and legs for wheelchair walks.

They are here today because of the Victoria Society for the Recreation of Handicapped Persons, which provides the young volunteers for escorts and special buses for wheelchair passengers.

Most of the other guests are from Gorge Road Hospital.

The Jones have been married for more than 45 years, and unlike some in their circumstances they are still able to be together — almost. He lives in Memorial's men's section, his wife in separate quarters at the pavilion.

He has lost most of the use of his legs, having been blown up at Etampes, France, in 1918. The nerves were affected and he spent two years in an army hospital. Now arthritis has set in.

"I get about a little on my two sticks," he says.

They might have held out on their own a little longer, but, Frank explains, his wife had a stroke.

And she is blind.

"He comes up and sees me every day," says Kate, and asks Frank if her tea has arrived.

Is it sometimes boring at the hospital? Do they tire of the basketry, the doll-making, the card games?

"Well, yes, but we make the best of it," Frank replies.

Kate reads some Braille. She used to get talking books when she was able to visit the Canadian National Institute for the Blind but since being confined to a wheelchair, it is no longer convenient.

"Except for a bit of arthritis, I maintain fairly decent health," Frank says with a touch of pride.

The tea has arrived, poured carefully by an attentive waitress who heaps before them hot buttered crumpets, chicken, ham and cheese sandwiches with the crusts removed, and iced white layer cake.

Most of the fruit salad has disappeared. The rest soon follows.

Peter Menzies and Suzanne Simard are in charge of the group.

They enjoy the tea with their wheelchair friends and are looking forward to the next assignment.

"The Jones are great fun," says Peter.

"I think we'll have to make this a regular feature," says Suzanne. Everyone likes it.

But there's a problem. Organizing events like the Empress affair takes money. And money is hard to come by for the people who work for the society.

That's where you come in.

The Times this month, in co-operation with CJVI, is sponsoring a campaign for operating funds for the recreation society.

Based in a storefront office at 2535 Government, the society has a staff of eight and is helped by about 80 volunteers.

It conducts 17 recreation programs for handicapped children, teenagers and adults, serving about 200 each month.

But government grants which have provided most of the financing have nearly expired.

HUGHES WAS ONLY WORTH $168 MILLION

LAS VEGAS (UPI) — Howard Hughes left an estate worth $168,834,165, far less than generally believed, according to documents filed today with the Nevada District Court.

The worth of the late industrialist's estate was declared in papers filed by Attorney William Morse with the Clark County clerk's office on the March 15 deadline.

It was the first actual public declaration of Hughes' estate which had been estimated in newspapers and magazine stories at from $2.5 billion to more than $4 billion.

Hijacker Moscow Bound

TURIN, Italy (AP)—An Italian hijacker ordered a Spanish airliner with 21 hostages to head for Moscow tonight. He hijacked the plane Monday and took it on an odyssey of more than 6,000 miles in Europe and Africa to gain possession of his two daughters.

The hijacker, 36-year-old Luciano Porcari, had ordered the Iberia Airlines Boeing 727 back to Turin from Zurich but told the pilot not to land until he heard the voice of his five-year-old daughter on the radio. His estranged Italian wife refused to turn her over.

Porcari, who hijacked the plane Monday with 37 persons on board, freed 14 hostages today in stops at Turin and Zurich.

Earlier today the hijacker had forced the Iberia airlines plane to fly from Turin to Zurich. When Swiss officials initially refused to refuel the plane he ordered it to take off again but it returned to Zurich in half an hour.

When the plane headed back for Turin tonight there were 15 passengers and 7 crew members on the aircraft, plus Porcari and his 3-year-old illegitimate daugh-

932,000 OUT OF WORK

Jobless Spirals To 19-Year High

OTTAWA (CP) — Unemployment in February soared to a new high of 932,000 actual jobless, compared with 800,000 a year ago, Statistics Canada reported today.

The unemployment rate, adjusted for seasonal factors, jumped substantially to 7.9 per cent, equalling the worst monthly level on record back in June, 1958.

February is the first month ever recorded by Statistics Canada in which the number of jobless exceeded 900,000. The figures are sure to prompt renewed calls upon the government to do something about worsening unemployment.

The agency began collecting job statistics in 1953.

In January, the actual total of unemployed was 889,000 and the seasonally-adjusted jobless rate, which is used to predict trends in the labor force, was 7.5 per cent.

In February, 1976, the seasonally-adjusted jobless rate was seven per cent.

Despite the national trend, the unemployment rate in B.C. dropped to 8.2 per cent, a decline of six-tenths of one per cent from January. There were 103,000 jobless in B.C. in February out of a labor force listed by Statistics Canada at 1,117,000. That compared to 112,000 unemployed in January and 109,000 jobless in February, 1976.

Former NDP labor minister Bill King said today it is significant that while the number of unemployed in B.C. has declined, so has the labor force.

King said that 10,000-person decrease in the labor force for February is the first time since the Second World War that the work force has declined.

"The biggest indicator of real growth in the economy is the growth of the labor force," he said.

B.C. workers, because of frustration and lack of confidence in the economy, have taken their expensive skills to Alberta, King said, where the labor force in February increased by 11,000.

Premier Bill Bennett said he would not comment on monthly statistics but only on employment trends over the period of several months.

Meanwhile in a report released today, the Canadian Council on Social Development warned that the country could be faced with a politically and economically explosive situation if nothing is done to ease severe unemployment among young people.

The jobless rate for men 15 to 24 rose by seven-tenths of one per cent to 14.5 per cent and was up 1.4 per cent to 14.2 per cent for women 15 to 24.

While the unemployment level was well up over February, 1976, the total number of persons with jobs also rose to 9,290,000 from 9,178,000.

But the total of new jobs of 112,000 fell well short of targets for job-creation set by the government in its last budget. Last May, Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said the government hoped the number of jobs would rise by 250,000 in a year.

A new budget is to be brought in on March 31 and Macdonald has said it will be mildly stimulative to expand growth in the economy.

The actual unemployment rate for February, Statistics Canada said, was 9.1 per cent, compared with eight per cent in the same month a year ago.

Unemployment rose chiefly among men aged 25 and over, and both women and men aged 15 to 24. The jobless rate for women 25 and over remained steady at seven per cent.

The jobless rate for men 25 and over rose by three-tenths of one per cent to 4.7 per cent.

Unemployment rates rose in six provinces, with the Atlantic provinces and Manitoba especially hard-hit, while the rates declined in four provinces, mostly in the West.

Newfoundland kept its hold as the province with the worst unemployment, with the rate soaring by 1.5 per cent from January to 15.1 per cent.

Nova Scotia had the second-largest increase in unemployment with the rate there rising by 1.1 per cent to 11 per cent.

MILK GOING UP

An industry-wide two-cent hike in the retail price of milk is forecast by Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt.

Fred Mockford, assistant general manager of Island Farms Dairies in Victoria agreed today with Hewitt's statement that factors in the industry will cause a price hike but said he is unable to predict when it will come.

He said there are too many variables to make exact predictions, but added a two-cent per litre price hike in the near future is "fairly definite."

The last price hike was in September, 1976. In Victoria, homo milk retails for about between 57 and 60 cents a litre depending on the store and the quantity purchased.

The amount the dairies pay to the farmers is calculated on a month-to-month basis. Increases are absorbed by the dairy until such time the increase has reached about a cent per litre and then the hike is passed on to the consumer, Mockford said.

Over the seven months since the last retail price increase, the cost of raw milk to the dairies has gone up, he added.

Wages in the industry are another factor.

Dairy workers in the Fraser Valley dairies receive a six per cent increase April 1.

Vancouver Island contracts run to September, but with the uncertainty of the future of the Anti-Inflation Board regulations, Mockford said he could make no predictions on labor's effect on the price of milk.

Saccharin Ban Leak Sparked Sugar Profits

TORONTO (CP) — News of an impending ban on saccharin was leaked from the office of Health Minister Marc Lalonde several days before a joint Canada-United States announcement of the ban, according to the Toronto Sun.

The newspaper says dozens of speculators who received advance notice of the ban on the artificial sweetener made profits buying sugar company shares and sugar futures, which rose after the announcement.

Sun columnist Morton Shulman says he was a benefactor of the leak and made a few thousand dollars trading on shares of Redpath Sugar, which rose following the announcement to $14.25 from $13.12.

Shulman says he heard of the ban four hours before it was announced last Wednesday.

He says one Toronto businessman who knew of the ban purchased 35 million pounds of sugar on the futures market at 8.7 cents a pound on the morning of the announcement. He says the man resold most of the holdings the following day for 9.2 cents, earning about $175,000.

In Ottawa, Rene Mercier, spokesman for Lalonde, denied allegations that the leak started in Ottawa. He said Lalonde believes the disclosure originated in the U.S.

"The sugar stocks in the U.S. were reacting to rumors as early as the Friday prior to the announcement," he said.

The ban on saccharin was announced after studies linked the sweetener to cancer. After July 1, soft drinks containing saccharin will be removed from Canadian supermarket shelves.

THE NOMINEES

Best Actress nominee Marie-Christine Barrault (Cousin, Cousine) is another newcomer to the North American film audience. She is, however, no stranger to European moviegoers.

Ms. Barrault was born in Paris into a talented family but was not brought up in a theatrical atmosphere. In 1964 she entered the Conservatoire National d'Art Dramatique where she studied acting for two years. Since then she has carved out a successful career for herself in television, theatre and film in Europe. Her films include Pierre Richard's Le Distrait and Eric Rohmer's Ma Nuit Chez Maud.

In the role of Marthe in Jean-Charles Tacchella's Cousin, Cousine, Ms. Barrault gives a profoundly sensitive portrayal of a woman involved in a forbidden love situation.

The competition is stiff in this year's Academy Awards contest and consequently Ms. Barrault's chances of winning appear to be slim at best.

Endure Long Strikes: AIB

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Company presidents must toughen their backbones and resist large wage increases when federal controls end next year, Anti-Inflation Board vice president June Menzies said Monday.

"Companies must be prepared to endure long strikes, if necessary, rather than give in," she said in an interview.

"Otherwise all that has been gained during the three years will be lost."

Companies have been leaning on the AIB regulations rather than learning to be tough, she said.

They have been telling unions: "We would like to give you more but the AIB won't let us."

The time is coming soon when they will have to stiffen their backs and say "No."

Federal Labor Minister John Munro said in Vancouver Monday a joint meeting of government, business and labor leaders will be held in April to discuss termination of controls.

"I can't recall when business and labor have met at the national level before."

Menzies said it is unlikely wage and price controls could be reintroduced once they are dismantled next year.

"People must realize we have been very lucky with the controls program. There are two things. First, the unions verbally opposed the controls but, in practice, they supported them—better than we could have dared to hope.

"Second, the recession coincided with the controls program. Because of the recession, we are in a good position to stand the shock of exit. In the United States, the economy was still surging when their program ended and all the gains disappeared when the program ended."

The same could happen in Canada, despite the recession, unless companies stand firm and insist that wage increases be linked to higher productivity.

She said the schedule for ending controls is still being debated.

The phase-out could begin on Jan. 2, 1978, with each company emerging from controls at the end of its fiscal year after that date. For most companies, this would mean the end of controls at the end of 1978.

Similarly, unions would come out at the end of their contract after Jan. 2, if the proposal is adopted.

The government is committed to end the controls program in 1978.

The target for inflation at the end of the controls program is four per cent, a goal that may be reached in 1978 if companies and unions cooperate.

Welfare Folk Degraded by Vander Zalm: Brown

By LIZ HUGHES
Times

Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm has used his office to lower and degrade people and has taken the province "back to the world of Charles Dickens," NDP human resources critic Rosemary Brown charged Monday.

Brown, speaking during debate on the spending estimates of Vander Zalm's office, said the handicapped, senior citizens, children with emotional problems and single parents have all been lowered and degraded by the minister's program.

She said Vander Zalm does not understand the difference between his department and other ministries such as mining and forestry and economic development.

Those departments, she said, "deal in things that touch people's lives, but the department of human resources is people's lives."

Brown led a more than three-hour attack on Vander Zalm which centred mainly on his "attitude."

"Social welfare is sharing among people," she said.

"This is a minister who measures everything in terms of dollars and cents saved at the expense of the people who can least afford it."

The handicapped and senior citizens in B.C. have been lowered and degraded because money from the federal government which was rightfully theirs was not passed on, she said.

Withholding of assistance to the Vancouver child abuse program has "lowered and degraded" children with emotional problems and lack of funding for transition houses for battered women has done the same to them, Brown said.

"He has used his office to destroy any kind of child care program in the province."

Vander Zalm, Brown said, is a "mockery and an insult" because of the "devastation worked on the people of this province."

"All we ever hear about is his (Vander Zalm's) calculations," she said.

Welfare fraud squads set up to check welfare ripoffs, are experts in "snooping, peeping and peering," Brown said.

"It implies people who are receiving social assistance are crooks.

"We find here the old assumption that the needy are needy because of drunkenness or long hair.

"They should not have to live under the threat of behave-and-shape-up or everything you depend on will be taken from you," she said.

Liberal leader Gordon Gibson, compared Vander Zalm to the Tin Man in the story The Wizard of Oz: "The Tin Man had no heart."

"This minister has an electronic calculator where his heart should be."

Gibson said he agreed with Brown's assessment that social assistance should be welfare instead of charity.

"You don't have to change the dollar amounts by one cent. It's a question of attitude."

Gibson said he estimated Vander Zalm's ministry would have a surplus of about $100 million by the end of the fiscal year March 31.

"It's taking from the old to give to the minister of finance. He's Robin Hood in reverse."

Vander Zalm earlier in the debate praised the Provincial Rehabilitation Employment Program (PREP) set up by his ministry to find jobs for welfare recipients.

He said 6,000 jobs had been found in the year since the program was started and those welfare recipients who have been found jobs are "grateful" to his department, the minister said.

But Gibson was sceptical.

The program had originally promised 12,000 jobs by Christmas, he said, and delivered only half that.

"But what I want to know is how many of these jobs are new. Is the agency acting as an addition to the job-finding market, without adding any thing to the job creation market."

Gibson said all problems in the department of human resources come down to a question of attitude.

"I'm all for saving a buck, but lets do what the legislation says. . . and share from the more fortunate to the less fortunate."

Tory leader Scott Wallace pressed the minister to expand on any long-term plans of his department to provide more assitance for elderly citizens forced to live in nursing homes.

Wallace said an older person in an acute care hospital, paying $4 a day for treatment, often gets trasnferred to a private nursing home and pays $821 per month.

Vander Zalm said any questions on long-term care of elderly patients would be better directed to the minister of health, whose spending estimates will be considered later in the session.

The minister said he will make no apologies for the amount of the surplus in his budget.

He said none of the surplus is because of cutbacks in programs, but that the number of people requiring assistance has decreased.

The number of people on social assistance is the lowest in between six and 10 years, he said.

"It's down because we created a more credible system."

He said he would have an announcement soon on a better child-care program for the province.

Shots at Gandhi's Son Hoax: Political Foes

Times NewsSer vices

NEW DELHI — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's son Sanjay escaped unharmed when shots were reportedly fired at his jeep Monday at the close of his first campaign for a seat in the Indian Parliament.

Opposition spokesmen, however, said today that the reported attack on the 30-year-old Sanjay Gandhi was a hoax to win sympathy for the ruling Congress party before parliamentary elections, which begin Wednesday and end Sunday.

"I think the whole incident is a fabrication, stage managed and manipulated," said Surinder Mohan, spokesman for the main opposition Janata People's party.

He contended his investigators had been unable to find any villagers in the area of the attack who had heard shots or knew ofthe incident.

The Janata party, formed recently by disaffected former Congress party members, has mounted such a strong electoral challenge that neutral observers are unsure whether Mrs. Gandhi will be able to extend her 11-year rule. The elections will be the first parliamentary vote in India since 1971.

Opponents of Mrs. Gandhi allege Sanjay is being groomed to succeed her, continuing the family hold on power begun 30 years ago by her late father, Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru.

Sanjay, who took over the youth wing of the Congress party during the state of emergency his mother ordered 20 months ago, said he did not know if the attackers "were trying to kill me or scare me."

The Indian news agency Samachar said the attackers fired five shots and three hit the jeep in which Sanjay was riding on his way to Amethi, 300 miles southeast of the capital. His bodyguards fired back but the gunmen escaped, the report said.

"Some of the bullets hit the seat and the body of the jeep, but Mr. Gandhi had a miraculous escape," Samachar quoted a district official as saying.

Balloting begins Wednesday and continues most of the week.

ENTOMBED 10 DAYS BY QUAKE, MAN FREE

VIENNA (Reuter) — A young man was pulled alive from the rubble of an apartment building in Bucharest today after being entombed for 10 days following an earthquake, the Agerpress news agency reports.

The survivor, 19-year-old Sorin Crainic, was found in the debris where he was buried for more than 250 hours without food or water following the devastating quake that hit Romania on the night of March 4.

There was no immediate word on his condition, but witnesses said he was able to walk and talk when found by a search party. He was put on a stretcher and taken to hospital.

The death toll from the quake has risen to 1,541, with more than 11,000 injured.

Coffee Prices Hiked Again

Times News Services

New price hikes brought on by smaller harvests and stockpiling at retail and consumer levels have pushed wholesale ground coffee prices past $4 a pound.

The moves by the Folger Coffee Co. of Cincinnati and CFS Continental of Chicago marked the first time major U.S. coffee roasters lifted wholesale ground coffee prices above $4 a pound.

Brazilian producers, meanwhile, said a drought in that nation's Sao Paulo region could seriously harm future production and force prices even higher.

Folger, the nation's No. 2 roaster, said Monday it was boosting wholesale ground coffee prices by 50 cents to $4.18 a pound.

CFS, the No. 1 institutional roaster, said it was raising ground coffee prices 30 cents a pound "to above the $4 mark."

It was the third price increase, totalling $1.10 a pound, set by Folger since Feb. 3.

Folger also said it was hiking wholesale instant prices by 10 cents an ounce.

Italian consul-general Emmanuele Scamacca spent one hour on board talking to Porcari but failed to persuade the hijacker to give himself up.

Instead Porcari demanded a fresh crew but Swiss authorities said this could be done only in exchange for more passengers.

Porcari, a 37-year-old auto mechanic, hijacked the plane over the Mediterranean Monday, then flew it to the Ivory Coast in West Africa, where he picked up a 3-year-old daughter.

He then forced the plane back to Europe via Seville, Spain, to Milan where he demanded to see another of his daughters. But his wife refused, and the hijacker took off for Zurich after releasing seven hostages.

10 ESCAPE INJURY IN TWO AIR CRASHES

A total of 10 people escaped serious injury in two air crashes on Vancouver Island on Monday.

A Fairchild Husky float plane on charter from Campbell River to Hemming Bay on East Thurlow Island with eight loggers aboard crashed in Discovery Passage near Copper Bluff at 8:15 a.m.

Piloted by Roland Bartlett of Campbell River, the plane was owned by Island Airlines of Campbell River.

The tip of one of the wings hit the water when Bartlett attempted a low turn in snow showers, an RCMP spokesman said. Bartlett and his passengers were unhurt and were rescued within minutes by Island Airlines employees and a small boat in the area at the time.

In another crash on Monday, Gregory Neily, 29, of Chilliwack, walked away unharmed after his Piper Cub lost power during take-off from the airport three miles south of Duncan and crash-landed in a nearby field at 9:30 a.m.

The plane was extensively damaged.

Pakistan Moving Ahead on N-Plan

ISLAMABAD (AP) — Pakistan is going ahead with construction of a controversial nuclear fuel reprocessing works despite pressure from Canada, the United States and other countries to abandon the $140-million project.

A government spokesman said Monday the decision to purchase the plant from France is compelled by future energy needs. He denied the facility will be used to help develop nuclear weapons.

"We have pursued this project with France much to the Americans' displeasure," said the spokesman, a senior foreign ministry official who asked not to be indentified by name.

"We're thinking in terms of our energy requirements 25 years from now," the official added.

The plant will become part of the planned Chasma nuclear centre 100 miles southwest of here. Diplomatic sources said once the facility is completed it will enable Pakistan—which already has the technical capability—to detonate a nuclear device "in a matter of months."

The sources said the plutonium separation plant has become the major issue in U.S.-Pakistani relations. Pakistani officials are concerned that because of it the United States may reject a Pakistani request for American A-7 Corsair jet combat planes.

The Chasma project has been designed to include the plutonium reprocessing facility and six nuclear power plants each capable of generating 600 megawatts of electricity. At current prices, the plants would cost Pakistan $600 million each, informed sources said.

Danson Brushes Off Trident Base Worries

OTTAWA (CP) — Defence Minister Barney Danson and the chief of defence staff today brushed aside concerns about danger to British Columbia because of construction of a Trident missile submarine base in Washington state.

Gen. J. A. Dextraze, the defence chief, said the base is of no more danger to B.C. than any other base in the United States.

Mr. Danson said those who protest construction of the base forget that the Trident missiles form a vital part of the U.S. nuclear deterrent capability.

The two men were answering questions in the Commons defence committee from Hugh Anderson (L—Comox-Alberni), who said there is strong concern in his province about the present construction of the base at Bangor, Wash.

The base has drawn protests in B.C. for more than a year.

The concern is two-fold: in the event of war the Soviet Union would attempt to knock it out with nuclear missilef it out with nuclear missiles subs would get in trouble in Canadian waters and cause major pollution.

Gen Dextraze said in committee and in an interview later that while Bangor would be important it would not be a major Soviet target.

The target would be the submarines deployed at sea—submarines that could fire their long-range missiles at the Soviet Union and then head for another base if there were any hint of danger to Bangor.

He said the Soviet Union knows this. Asked what he would go after in the event of war, a Soviet Delta submarine or its base, he replied the submarine.

He said the Bangor base is of no more danger to the Vancouver-Victoria area than is the Comox Canadian Forces base on Vancouver Island to the United States.

He said any time an American nuclear submarine comes into Canadian waters it has a Canadian escort in case of trouble.

Danson said some of those who protest the Trident base forget that the U.S. is Canada's ally.

He said it is part of the vital nuclear deterrent thatis supposed to stop a third world war. He said some people want the base put in somebody else's backyard.

the weather

The disturbance which caused Monday's unsettled conditions has moved well to tthe southwest of the province. However, some showers or flurries lingered overnight in southern B.C. especially along inner coast. As drier air is drawn from the interior today, precipitation will become localized and slow clearing will occur over most of these regions. Elsewhere in the province, cold temperatures under clear skies were reported overnight from almost every locality and considerable sunshine and slightly-below seasonal temperatures are expected today. The next system to affect B.C. will move from the Gulf of Alaska and reach the Charlottes late tonight and the south coast Wednesday afternoon or evening. The relatively cool air over the province will persist so that snow flurries may initially be mixed with showers as this system moves over coastal regions.

$20,000 Profit Denied by Developer

VANCOUVER (CP) — Jack Poole, president of Daon Development Corp., Monday rejected a charge by a lecturer at University of British Columbia that Daon and other companies own thousands of acres of developable land in the greater Vancouver area and that developers are adding up to $20,000 to the price of a house through speculation.

The charges were levelled by Tom Gunton of UBC's school of community and regional planning at a weekend NDP caucus meeting.

Gunton said that between six and 12 corporations, including Daon and Block Bros. Realty, own at least 5,000 to 7,000 acres of land in the Greater Vancouver area and have more under option.

He also said rates of return were excessive, quoting 88 per cent for Daon and 42 per cent for Block Bros., with deferred income tax claims accounting for huge hidden profits.

Poole said Gunton's statements are a favorite topic for someone seeking a platform.

Daon's profit margin on sales last year was between six and seven per cent, he said.

Referring to Guntons 88-per-cent figure, Poole said: "I wish I could convince the shareholders on that.

Most of Daon's income tax was deferred last year because of federal taxation provisions, he said.

"It's not my job to defend government income tax policy," poole said.

Daon owns 127 acres of development land in the Greater Vancouver regional district — not including apartment and townhouse sites which, he said, account for minimum acreage.

The company also holds 131 acres in the Fraser Valley, 870 in Kelowna, and options on at most 200 acres.

"Competitive market conditions are a thing of the past," Gunton said in calling for establishment of a land bank and government-control of the whole land development process.

He said that in 1976, on an average selling price of $73,000, construction and land development costs were $53,360, leaving a profit of $19,640.

In 1975, profit was an average $18,300 on a final selling price of $65,000.

Developers argue that long waits before projects are approved add to the cost, Gunton said, but in Toronto where the waits stretch to two and three years, cost of housing is the same as it is in Vancouver, where the delay rarely is more than six months.

Zaire Seeks U.S. Aid 'To Repel Attackers'

By MURREY MARDER
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Zaire has asked the United States "for assistance in the form of materiel" to help repel what it calls an invasion by "foreign mercenaries" across its border with Angola, the state department said Monday.

Other sources said that Zaire has asked the United States for "a broad spectrum" of military equipment to cope with the extremely murky conflict since March 8 in the former province of Katanga, now known as Shaba.

Administration officials were unusually secretive about what Zaire is requesting, and what they intend to do about it.

This sensitivity is partially a product of the tortuous history of the region.

Official sources maintained that the dimension of the conflict, the forces involved, and their objective, are all unclear, so far as the United States is concerned.

Several sources said that what appears to be happening is a retaliatory action arising from the Angolan civil war, in which the United States and Zaire supported the losing side.

The two losing factions in Angola's civil war in 1975-76 were the National Front for the Liberation of Angola, headed by Holden Roberto, and the National Union for the Total Liberation of Angola, led by Jonas Savimbi. Both were supplied with Central Intelligence Agency funds, until Congress cut off all support in late 1975.

Agostinho Neto's Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola (MPLA) won that war, with massive materiel support from the Soviet Union and from 12,000 to 15,000 Cuban troops, most still in Angola.

Fighting on the side of the MPLA also were several thousand Katanga gendarmes, remnants of the forces led by the late Moise Tshombe's ill-fated independence movement in Katanga in the 1960s, when Zaire was known as the Congo, a former Belgian colony.

$1.2B BILL PLACED ON HEART DEATHS

OTTAWA (CP) — Diseases of the cardiovascular system cause more than 50 per cent of deaths in Canada and cost the economy more than $1.2 billion annually, says a report from a committee studying the relationship between diet and cardiovascular disease.

The report, made public Monday by the health department, urges Canadians to avoid smoking, keep physically fit and eat according to government-issued guides for a balanced diet.

The report was written by a seven-member committee of independent experts formed in 1973 and headed by Dr. J. S. Mustard, a heart specialist from Toronto.

Contained in the report are dietary recommendations such as a reduction of about 10 per cent in the calorie intake of the average Canadian.

Other recommendations include implementation of a diet containing less alcohol, salt and refined sugars, and more grain products, fruit and vegetables and the prevention and control of obesity by reducing excess calories and increasing physical activity.

The government is examining the report, the health department said.

Counter-Protest Greets Save-the-Seals Group

Times News Services

ST. ANTHONY, Nfld. — Helicopters chartered by a group of protesters against the annual east coast seal hunt prepared to fly over the sealing grounds today after counter protesters were shoved and carried away from the aircraft by RCMP officers.

Brian Davies, leader of the anti-hunt forces, was taken out the back door of a motel by policemen when Newfoundland fishermen lay down on the snow outside the front door of Davies' motel unit and challenged him to walk on their bodies to reach his helicopter.

Davis boarded his aircraft without incident but the helicopter refused to start immediately.

Five other helicopters took off for an air base about a mile away to take on fuel for the flight over the herd.

There was mainly good-natured banter between the fishermen protesting against the protestors, and RCMP said there was no violence of any sort.

Meanwhile, the annual spring slaughter of harp and hood seals on the sprawling ice field got under way at first light today under clear skies.

Winds were 15 knots out of the northwest, providing ideal conditions for the 11 ships taking part in the hunt.

A member of the fisheries department team estimating the seal population off Labrador, meanwhile, describes as "utterly not true" a claim by the Greenpeace Foundation that the survey has not found enough seals to permit the annual hunt.

Greenpeace said Monday a government search of sealing areas turned up evidence of only 40,000 harp seal pups, 57,000 fewer than the quota set for the area in this year's hunt.

Mair's Solid Foundation

Last year Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Rafe Mair said the ancient consumer law of caveat emptor was no longer sufficient to protect consumers from exploitation by a minority of dishonest businessmen. The new Consumer Protection Act proves the minister is as good as his word. Obvious measures such as plugging holes which allowed income tax rebaters to collect annual interest rates of 400 per cent, and new regulations making it illegal for credit card companies to contract with stores that discounts not be allowed for cash payments are included.

If it is easy to see obvious injustices in the market system it is quite another thing to correct them. Dishonest businessmen often find new loopholes or new methods of doing business that circumvent legislation, no matter how carefully it is refined. Adding to the confusion is an overlap with federal laws. Provincial governments must be careful to design complementary legislation. For example, under section 29 of the new act consumers have the option of prepaying interest-bearing debts at any time without penalty, but the penalty does not apply to real estate mortgages. Realtors argue that such legislation would create disruptions in the market. If mortgages are financed at 12 per cent and then paid off completely when rates go down, companies would lose money. At present the federal Borrowers and Depositors Protection Act is before the House of Commons. Ottawa is now wrestling with a three month penalty clause contained in the act to which the industry is also opposed. Since the new B.C. act contains considerable power to amend by regulation, the province can follow up its own legislation after Ottawa passes its bill.

Other regulations include a cooling-off period of seven days for a buyer to cancel most contracts signed with door-to-door sales people providing the contract is more than $20. Prepaid contracts are restricted to two years' duration and a total initial payment of $750, a measure directed against fly-by-night health spas or dance studios. Under the rights of guarantors, banks and financial institutions can no longer sue for the full value of a seized article such as a car if only a few payments have been made.

Much of this legislation will be difficult to enforce, as the minister said, but it is a good start in putting the loan sharks and con artists out of business. Mair deserves congratulations for the careful framing of this bill, and its staunch protection for the consumer. The public will look forward to more legislation of this nature, including the Motor Dealer Licensing Act, from his ministry. If this act isn't perfect and leaves many areas of the marketplace without controls, it's still an act of faith from a relatively new ministry. Given this foundation, Mair should be able to build a solid edifice of consumer protection in the future.

RICHARD GWYN

PM: Grace Under Pressure

OTTAWA — He came in so quietly that almost before we knew it he had sat down at the table, a single microphone in front of him, the Maple Leaf flag beside him. Before the press gallery vice-president called the press conference to order there was time only to note that Prime Minister Trudeau was looking every one of his 57 years, that he seemed taut and wary, and that the pink rose in his lapel was dropping its petals.

In nearly 20 years in Ottawa I cannot recall any press conference at which, at the beginning, the tension was so palpable and so personal. Trudeau had been prepared for his impending rite of passage by his communications adviser, Dick O'Hagan. We reporters were as edgy. In the minutes before the press conference started we teased those colleagues brash enough to pledge to ask The Question by saying that they would pay for it by a 10-year term in Tuktoyaktuk.

Privacy Violated?

So much depended upon the first question and upon the first answer. If either were bungled, a private escapade, already turned into a public spectacle, could escalate into a major political incident—a prime minister fighting the press on behalf of his wife, and the press brawling back.

Brian Nelson was the first journalist to be recognized. He's a young reporter for radio Broadcast News. His voice was high and strained as he read—a first in anyone's memory—from a question he had typed out in advance.

"Mr. Prime Minister, your wife's travels over this last week have been given a great deal of public attention . . . Do you feel that your privacy or that of your wife's has been violated? And when does the wife of a prime minister cross the line from being a private to a public person?"

There was, in the room, a quick sense of relief among the journalists. Nelson's question had been impeccable — polite, not impertinent nor gross, but not namby-pamby either.

A short pause, while Trudeau composed his reply and while we tensed for it. Then he spoke, his voice, always low, now so soft that you only could hear him through the earphones.

"I think if she goes to a rock concert which is very celebrated, she has to expect to be noticed and to be written about. I have no complaints about that . . . My wife's private life is her affair and mine. If it becomes public it is very important, but so long as it is private I don't think it should be dealt with by innuendo."

An impeccable reply, like a salute between two sides, required by convention to fight each other but not wanting, on this occasion, do to it. In a few sparse sentences, Trudeau managed to exonerate the Canadian press for the way it had covered Margaret, had let Margaret know he was not amused by her antics, and had let press and public know he would defend her against any slander or gossip.

It is hard to think of any other public figure capable of such a performance in circumstances so tense, so explosive and yet also so delicate. One wanted, though reporters aren't allwed to do this, to applaud during the 40-minute press conference. Trudeau demonstrated what Ernest Hemingway must have had in mind when he defined courage as "grace under pressure."

As the tension slipped away, Trudeau, used humor to turn a public spectacle back into a private escapade. Margaret had taught him a lot about rock music said Trudeau, and they had gone to rock concerts together. Then he stuck a finger into his ear, and grimaced. Her favorites, actually, were not the Rolling Stones but the Beatles. "I hope, though, she doesn't start seeing the Beatles."

Margaret, presumably, won't notice these barbs. She will, presumably, stage-manage other media events. Nor is this particular incident yet closed. Some rather dramatic photographs of Margaret partying with the Rolling Stones apparently are due to be published soon.

Much Gallantry

Margaret is our own contemporary Zelda Fitzgerald. What she is or does though, is titillating but not, in the end in tolerable.. At the most, she did for a week give us something to talk about other than the aches of Confederation and the pains of the economy.

The memory worth keeping is how Trudeau performed when stretched beyond the limits that should be expected of any public figure. Might Margaret's behavior lose him votes, Trudeau was asked.

"If she loses me votes then I'm sorry, but don't expect her to stop going to rock concerts. It's okay with me. It's her private life which is of concern to me."

Few spouses, erring or not, can have been defended with as much gallantry by those to whom they have given pain.

Interesting Banking Development

Only a month ago the Canadian Bankers' Association said lack of computerization would make it terribly costly to compute interest on a daily, weekly or monthly basis. In fact, it would be well-nigh impossible for these corporate giants to do such a thing, and if Ottawa had the temerity to force the issue in revisions to the Bank Act the banks warned they could lower interests rates on savings account. This threat was recanted in a subsequent press release, but the banks left no doubts that computing interest on a daily basis was unthinkable.

So what do we hear now? The Bank of British Columbia — among the smallest of the chartered banks — has announced an account that will calculate interest rates on a daily basis, providing the customer has a minimum $500 balance. Since that $500 was initially deposited at relatively low interest rates as opposed to term deposits which afford higher interest rates, customers might be better off placing their $500 in one, two, or even five-year term deposits if they can afford it. Still, the Bank of British Columbia deserves a modicum of credit for plunging into an area its big brothers disdain, and show no signs of entering unless forced by government legislation.

It is ironic to note that while larger banks claim calculating interest on minimum daily balances would be difficult, British Columbia credit unions have managed to do it since 1968, without a minimum balance required, it should be said. If chartered banks have a long way to go before they really start to compete in the marketplace of small customers, it is good to see a home-grown financial institution leading the industry out of its neanderthal ways. Goodness gracious, what a little proposed legislation can do! Now if the Commons can only pass these revisions to the Bank Act before the Senate banking committee further waters the legislation, we may restore a little balance in the country yet.

Chilling B.C.

An iceberg is an iceberg, is an iceberg! And it's too bad. For our present government is cooling the economic and social climate in this province far too much. From its first pronouncements to the present, there have been too many retrograde decisions. These, as we have learned from time to time, can by no means all be laid at the door of the former government, many of whose policies are demonstrating their statesmanship.

With an inordinate eye for a full money-bag, the government has squeezed the economy and under-supplied human need, to our common disadvantage. We must remember that to put more into circulation means we get more out of it. On our present policy the money-bag doesn't get as well-filled, when likely sources of revenue are ignored.

It is not strange that the warmer policies of the former government, that are providing such good returns from our public corporations, will make possible a balanced budget, if such occurs.

Socred backbenchers and members of the New Democrat, Liberal and Conservative parties have equal authority from the citizens of B.C. to participate as fully as possible in the conduct of the province's affairs as cabinet members, except for administrative responsibilities. Our affairs, mind you, not the cabinet.

It is a duty of government to respect the citizens by respecting their choice of representatives. Any failure in doing this will confirm criticism that tendencies to authoritarianism in James Bay are strengthening.

The destiny of an iceberg is to melt, eventually, but the temperature of much government action still chills B.C. We should realize that the ship of state can be sunk if it hits an iceberg in its course. — Harold T. Allen, 2140 Kings Road.

MLAs Diligent

Why single out MLAs for censure, Mr. Bennett? Some of them, particularly in the opposition, are very worthy, hard-working individuals. Some of your cabinet ministers, in my opinion, are giving a below par performance. If you should receive enough flack from the public on these individuals, would you consider halving their salaries? Mr. Vander Zalm is a prime example. Why not cut his salary by $5,000 every time he makes some idiotic statement? By now the man would be working for gratis. — Mrs. Ruth M. Ball, 338 Dallas Rd.

Are university salaries high, or not high enough?

No Gravy Train

In your editorial of March 3 (Seats on the Gravy Train), the figures you quoted were inaccurate and the conclusions drawn from them were consequently questionable. Your editorial contained two bad errors of fact and several distortions.

"A full professor at a B.C. university today earns at least $35,000 a year." That figure is high by $10,000 — an error of merely 40 per cent.

"Even a lecturer at the bottom of the pecking order earns more than $17,000." That figure is high by $5,000 — likewise a 40 per cent error. So much for journalistic accuracy.

It is a distortion to call sabbatical leave a "fringe benefit", and it is grossly unfair to generalize from one case (that of Dr. Suzuki) about the almost 3,000 university professors in B.C. The facts are very different and speak for themselves. At the University of Victoria a professor may apply for study leave (as it is correctly called) and he must submit a proposed plan of study, research or professional development. In return for this desire to improve himself, and thus benefit his institution, if he is granted study leave, he receives but two-thirds of his salary. He invariably has to move his family for a year to another city (often abroad), find schools for his children and solve a score of other domestic problems. The result is that this "fringe benefit," as you call it, is so unattractive that this year less than one-third of those who are eligible are actually going on study leave. Those who go may be able to afford gravy but they may not be able to buy the meat to pour it over.

It is unfair to call tenure "an inordinate amount of job security" and it is simply incorrect to claim that the safeguards of academic freedom have been built up in recent years "to such a degree that university staff have become coddled and excessively insulated." It takes about five years to get tenure at UVic (compare this to the six-month probation in many areas of the public service) and the procedures to deal with incompetence and abuses have been in effect, unchanged, since 1968.

Professors at university find it quite humorous that you would call them "a highly privileged class." Over the past six years, their salaries have declined in real dollars. It is indeed "time for a searching examination of the whole matter of remuneration for university staff."

Such an examination would demonstrate once and for all that academics, who have the highest educational qualifications in our society, are grossly underpaid compared to other groups who have no academic qualifications and who did not spend 10 years out of the labor force earning a Ph.D. A person who embarks upon an academic career has to expect lifetime earnings well below those of plumbers, electricians and similar trades, to say nothing of comparable professions. — Rod Symington, President, University of Victoria Faculty Association.

(At Simon Fraser University, the same categories for last fall (the latest figures available) were: full professor, an average of $34,688; associate, $24,100; assistant, $20,650. An instructor-lecturer earns an average of $16,500. There is no equivalent figure for UBC.

(At the University of Victoria, the four categories are $35,719 for a full professor, $26,319 for an associate, $21,615 for an assistant and $16,512 for a lecturer.

(The Times erred in stating $35,000 was the minimum figure. The rest of the charges of unfairness or distortion are, we suggest, a matter of opinion.

Editorial Quality

I wish to commend you on the fine quality of the editorial content of the Victoria Times.

NDP Tirade

Having read the tirade of the NDP Provincial Leader Dave Barrett against the Social Credit's abolition of succession duties, one is left to wonder whether he is more concerned with his political ideology than with the financial welfare of the province. People do leave when overtaxed.

This move by the Social Credit government should have two results: one, it should stop the outflow of wealthy retired people from the province; two, it should attract Canadians from other provinces who wish to stay in Canada and prefer to live in B.C. rather than in Alberta.

If Mr. Barrett would sit down quietly with paper and pencil, he would ascertain that 31.5 per cent (provincial percentage of federal income tax) of a substantial tax for a period of 10 or 20 years could represent a considerable amount of provincial revenue.

Consider that if those people leave the province, there is neither income tax nor succession duties and the answer is pretty obvious.

However, that's only mathematics and common business sense as opposed to a political ideology. — D. B. Smith, 5625 Parker Avenue.

Millionaire Medicine

James Swanson, president of the B.C. Pharmacists' Society, is reported to have said that B.C. pharmacists are "gearing up" for a bonanza of new business by printing a new drug label to meet the demand under the proposed new government extended plan for free medication for all, including millionaires. This new idea is said to be on a "pay cash" basis for government reimbursement later.

This flight of fancy has sent a flutter of concern and confusion through the ranks of OAPs who now pay nothing on pharmacare. May we suggest, with respect, that whatever the new measure may mean to the figures of the fiscal year due at the end of this month, there shall be no beating about the bush for cash on the barrel head from OAPs who haven't got it; Mr. Swanson's nice new labels notwithstanding. — Clarence Goode, 1840 St. Ann.

Manly Tradition

The March 3 letter Pheasants from Alexander Mackenzie on recreational pheasant shooting appears a passionate plea for man, the endangered species. The writer emphasizes the fallacy of ecologists who condemn the promoters and followers of the shoot as "monsters" and "philistines." In fact, the writer implies, when our shooting friend sets forth with his twenty gauge, and whistling up his dogs to the tune of Haydn's Symphony No. 98, he is gamely pitting his human brain against all the ancient, feral cunning which is still strongly instinctive in even these domesticated pheasants.

Thus these sportsmen, in the manly tradition of the chase, endure slogging through swamp and scrub timber and bramble, with many a Brooks Brothers safari jacket returning to tell a sorry tale.

Long may they stand to lift a toast to their hard-won trophies mounted above the mantel-piece, before their dates with Mendelssohn and Bach!—Marion Welkant, Victoria.

Pheasants, Dogs

Re pheasant hunting, your correspondent is mistaken in saying a pheasant can outrun any dog, even "in open fields." The birds around our place could not outrun even our fat little Boston bull terrier. When Mike disobeyed orders and took off after one, that bird soon had to take to the air.

With its short flight capacity, it would soon have been in trouble it is pursuer had been a big strong dog capable of continuing the chase for any time.

It is claimed also that the hand-reared birds would have no trouble in surviving if they did escape death when released for sport shooting because anyway the pheasant is an introduced species and must in the early days have had to adjust to a new habitat. But in those days there was much more unsettled habitat for them to seek food and shelter in unthreatened by all the dangers of human settlement. And, even then, how many died trying to acclimatize? — A. E. Davies, 4611 Vantreight Drive.

Genuine Concern

I too would like to say praise God for doctors who wish to make it known that they believe in the right to life of the unborn, as well as of any other person or imagebearer of God (for all of us are his workmanship!)

Thank you, doctors, for your genuine concern and respect for human life. — Anne De Bryune, 4160 Glanford Avenue.

A Shorter Week To Share the Work?

By C. GORDON TETHER

LONDON — "Perhaps we should think in terms of trying to interest the other leading countries in the idea of arranging an agreed reduction in working hours." So said Britain's Prime Minister James Callaghan recently in the course of doing some thinking aloud about a relatively new feature of the global scene. This is the mounting evidence that the industrial world's productivity achievements are confronting it with a serious structural unemployment problem by eliminating existing jobs at a pace materially exceeding that at which it will be possible to create new ones, even given a general resumption of sustained economic growth.

In a world wherein so much manifestly still needs to be done, that may seem an odd proposition to put forward. Yet the plain fact is that it is beginning to look very much as though, in the absence of a massive reorganization of the global economic system — aimed at, for example, unleashing the enormous latent demand in the third world — only the widespread rationing of opportunities to work is going to prevent the present high levels of unemployment becoming the rule rather than the exception.

'Problem of Success'

Researches carried out by the economic back-room boys in Britain have reached the disconcerting conclusion that there is one thing that the pre-industrialization program, by which the government is setting so much store, is not going to work. It will make no major contribution to the solution of the unemployment problem — not, at least, this side of the 1980s. The reason, quite simply, is that attaining the level of productivity needed to enable the industries concerned to hold their own in international markets will mean operating with greatly reduced work-forces.

The economically strong countries are in a somewhat better position in the sense that, their goods already being appropriately competitive, they should be able to count on the overall demand for them growing fast enough to provide an antidote to the redundancy problem created by the onward march of productivity. Yet all the indications are that even they are not going to enjoy anything like a complete immunity from this new "problem of success."

Certainly, their governments have in many cases been warning their peoples that it will be some time before the pre-expansion programs they are putting into operation begin to find expression in a decisive reversal of the steep increases in unemployment totals produced by the recession experiences of the last few years.

Moreover, it is becoming more and more apparent that in the absence of major moves to sober up the productivity "rat race" the damage inflicted by it will not be confined to its impact on unemployment rates. The fact that the verbal war that has been developed between the Japanese and the European Community for some time past over Japan's enthusiasm for enlarging its European markets has now led to a European Economic Community (EEC) decision to impose an anti-dumping duty on Japanese ball bearings shows that the principles of free trade are threatened.

It was the claim of the European bearings makers that their Japanese rivals had been following pricing policies aimed at "ruining and displacing competitors in world markets" that persuaded the Common Market to make this step. Yet the purpose of encouraging free trade is to allow — if not to stimulate — competition effectively aimed at displacing competitors in world markets. This is, indeed, the name of the multilateral trade game, the contention being that the world as a whole benefits from such warfare in that the effect of it is — or should be — to ensure that production is located where it can be carried out at lowest economic cost.

It has been argued that, as the EEC is devoted to the principles of free trade, its action implies that the Japanese are guilty of unfair trading practices. But the reality seems to be that their productivity achievements in the ball bearings field are making the competitive going too hot even for such acutely productivity-conscious countries as West Germany. Considerations of the same kind must also large explain the efforts European countries have been making to persuade the Japanese to impose voluntary restraints on their inconveniently competitive exports of steel, ships and cars.

Since trade warfare is notoriously apt to feed on itself, the course the productivity explosion is now taking could have international consequences calculated to compound the problems it is generating on the unemployment front.

Must Act Together

Whether the industrialized countries as a whole can be induced to look for relief through a general shortening of working-hours — and this would only be possible if they were prepared to act in concert—remains to be seen. Some indication of their attitude should emerge from the summit conference of leading countries due to take place in a few months time, since Prime Minister Callaghan has promised to raise the question of a joint attack on unemployment there.

What does seem clear is that the tendency for the world's productivity successes to cause the supply of goods flowing into world markets to grow at a materially faster pace than the demand for them is one problem that the pace-setting countries cannot afford to go on disregarding for years at a time in the way they have so many others. Either they will have to devise new measure for expanding demand or see competition finding expression in ever-increasing unemployment and growing recourse to isolationism.

'Canadian Professors Are Overpaid'

By JERRY MALZAN

(Malzan is an assistant professor of mathematics at the University of Waterloo whose salary is $19,700 a year. He wrote this for the Toronto Star.)

Canada
Professor	$31,350
Associate	$22,850
Assistant	$18,450
United States
Professor	$24,590
Associate	$18,060
Assistant	$14,670

The list of complaints against the Canadian university system is long, and likely to get longer. The familiar public suspicions about falling standards, discrimination against Canadians and their culture, academic mediocrity sometimes bordering on incompetence, the sanctioned use of sabbaticals as paid year-long vacations from academic duties, and the use of public money to recruit students are, in my view, well-founded.

What is less well-known is that a strong case can be made that academics in Canada are, on average, substantially overpaid. The accompanying table shows that our academics last year earned about 26 per cent more than their counterparts in the U.S. With raises this year running somewhat higher than in the U.S., I would guess the difference now approaches 30 per cent.

★ ★ ★

In 11 years of teaching at the University of Waterloo I have heard only two professors suggest that faculty salaries might be a little high. The common spoken and written view is that professors are underpaid, falling behind inflation, and the victims of a stingy government which fails to properly recognize their towering excellence and sweaty devotion to teaching load of two and a half to three courses (five to nine hours per week in the classroom), sabbaticals every seventh year with, mostly, no requirement to show research activity, we offer wages substantially superior to those paid in the U.S. Small wonder, then, that academics the world over have lined up to get aboard the already overcrowded gravy train that the Canadian university system has become.

★ ★ ★

We used to believe in peace, order and good government, while the Americans explored the limits of liberal individualism. The universities helped put an end to that distinction recognizing, as they did, no understandable philosophical boundary between ourselves and our neighbors to the south, and remade themselves on the American model. They are thus entitled, it seems to me, to the whole hog, wages and all, and perhaps less.

★ ★ ★

Those of my American colleagues who teach in the United States rather than here are almost always amazed when told about the nifty academic life-style available throughout this country. In addition to a five-month annual paid holiday for those uninterested in research, a duty. Behind those words lie, I believe, a fear that these halcyon days will not continue; that there may be some truly rough bumps between now and the carefully contrived retirement plans. And then some.

I should emphasize that I do not conceive this as an attack on the academic profession. Wages must come down, yes, but that is what is required, I argue, for the immediate and ultimate health of the profession, which is at present staffed to the limit by the middle-aged, excluding the best of the younger generation.

I cheerfully recognize that the Canadian university system contains some truly first-class people, as well as some who are genuinely underpaid, even in an absolute sense. What I will not admit is that the percentage of people in either category is very large.

The operating budget for 1976-77 for Ontario universities is $627 million, nearly half of which goes to faculty salaries. Ignoring for now the non-faculty fat in university budgets, there is an annual saving to the Ontario taxpayer of $72 million to be made if academic salaries are brought down to the U.S. level where, incidentally, there is no great hue and cry about the inadequacy of remuneration.

The argument may be made that lower salaries for faculty will drive out the best people, who can get offers elsewhere, leaving our universities with the amiable mediocrities who are a major fact of life in universities almost everywhere. We will hear, in other words, that quality education costs money, especially in Canada. The easy reply is that the universities spend their allotted budgets at will and, if they are truly concerned about excellence, can reward it to their hearts' content, provided they are willing to pay less lavishly for routine teaching duties and trivial or non-existent research.

★ ★ ★

I find myself forced to suggest that provincial governments sharply curtail university budget increases until such time as only those with a genuine commitment to, and talent for, university life remain. We cannot afford in this country to go on paying for fumbling mediocrity as if it were shining excellence.

'Stop Lottery Hard Sell'

TORONTO STAR
An Editorial

There's something more than little distasteful about the way federal and provincial governments are trying to outhustle each other with their get-rich-quick lottery schemes.

Instead of forever competing in hard-sell campaigns to persuade Canadians to spend more on lotteries these governments should get together to agree on some limits on the number and size of lotteries and how much competitive advertising there should be.

In the first place, lotteries represent instant riches to only a tiny handful of the people who spend their hard-earned money on them. The odds of winning $1 million in Loto-Canada, for example are 1 in 625,000. Nevertheless, Canadians have forked over more than $700 million on these long odds since the first Olympic Lottery (Loto-Canada's predecessor) was held in April, 1974.

The least lottery operators could do would be to make the chances of winning clear, both in their advertising and on the tickets.

Beyond that they should really examine the nature of their advertising. It ranks up there with the most seductive and hard-sell of private business commercials. Is it really necessary? In view of the obvious popularity of lotteries among thousands of Canadians who want to buy a dream for $1, or $10, it would not seem so.

In fact, early last month, consumer Affairs Minister Anthony Abbott made that same assessment. "I must confess some of the advertising showing people redecorating their homes, buying new boats and so on as a result of buying a ticket are excessive," he said.

Many Canadians, particularly those who don't buy lottery tickets, would agree with that view.

Couldn't Abbott have a chat with Loto-Canada officials, then pick up the phone and see if he can't persuade his provincial counterparts to tone down their own pie-in-the-sky peddling?

Taking Care of Business

russell baker

I wanted to reassure Business. It was civic duty. The business of America is Business, said Calvin Coolidge, and the business of Americans is reassuring Business.

One of the first things every new President must do is reassure Business, and President Carter has been busy reassuring Business ever since the ballots were counted. It is good to see him doing his bit to help Business overcome its doubts and insecurities, but it leaves little time for other well wishers to get in during visiting hours.

"I'm very sorry," said the man at the club when I arrived to issue reassurances, "but Business is tied up just now being reassured by Mr. Carter."

★ ★ ★

Would one care to leave a message? One would. "Business, you've got what it takes in my book," I wrote, and had it sent in.

The next day the Dow Jones average went over 1,000. Carter and I had done pretty good jobs, although both of us knew that within a day or two all our work could be undone and Business could slip back into the dumps without warning.

What accounts for Business's constant need of reassurance? It seems to suffer from the adolescent's social insecurity, which sends it into fits of despondency at the slightest hint of disagreeability in the air. The financial pages read like the psychiatric chart of an acute neurotic.

The Federal Reserve Board speaks, and Business plunges into a spell of the blues. The Board speaks again, and Business is giddy with delight. Another word from the Board and Business lapses into dark suspicion. "Business Cautious On Fed Move" say the headlines.

This is the signal that Business needs to be reassured, to be told, "Dear old Business, do not be blue; if the Fed signals caution, good news from the Commerce Department cannot be far behind."

And when the Commerce Department does indeed announce a rise in the leading economic indicators, Business picks its chin from the floor. "There is rising confidence in Business" report the psychiatrists of the financial pages, "occasioned by the announcement of a one point percentage rise in the leading economic indicators."

In a normal neurotic, this injection of economic serum would suffice to withstand the next day's despicable behavior by the Treasury. "Treasury Says Inflation Still Unchecked."

"Unchecked inflation!" groans poor old Business, all its confidence ebbing away. One struggles to reassure it with fresh retail-sales figures and sees the old confidence soar, only to be shot down again by news from abroad. Bleakness and woe! What matters a rise in retail sales when the balance of trade figures are unfavorable?

One would think, from these emotional vacillations, that Business were a plain girl with acne terrified of not being invited to the prom, if Business were not so assiduously courted by all the big men on campus.

Election returns produce extreme emotional responses in Business. If A is elected, Business experiences a surge of confidence. If B is elected, Business shuts itself up at the club and listens to its confidence crack. What is the consequence of the election? "Loss Of Confidence."

What is the task confronting victorious Candidate B? "He must move swiftly to reassure Business." He must go to the club. "Feeling pretty low today, Business?" "Nobody loves me. I'm going to slash my sales."

★ ★ ★

Candidate B, of course, always turns out to be just as fond an admirer of Business as Candidate A would have been. This is why Business's dip in the Slough of Despond is so irrational. In a country where both political parties are conservative and dedicated to the good health of big capital, it would require a foraging trip through the attic of history to find a politician who did not take the reassuring of Business as one of his primary tasks.

Of course, if Candidate B hurts the confidence of Business more than Candidate A, then Candidate B must do more than Candidate A to reassure Business that it truly is all right in his book. Carter has done the usual amount of reassuring that it will be Business as usual in Washington, and the patient's chart shows a gratifying rise in confidence.

With this patient, however, all progress may be lost by Friday, and probably will be if somebody points out it has a pimple on its chin.

Let's face it.

Hiring extra help has become difficult for most small businessmen. That's why summer students represent such a good opportunity for you.

Think. There must be some short term projects around the office, plant or store that you've been putting off until you could free someone up. Maybe your warehouse needs to be reorganized. How about that mess behind the shipping dock? Perhaps the furnace room needs repainting. Doesn't the summer holiday schedule put a bit of a strain on your clerical capabilities? The possibilities are virtually without limit.

And that's what summer students are for. Your Canada Manpower Centre for Students is geared up to place capable, eager young men and women in the workforce for as little as a day, a week, a month. Or as long as you need.

Do yourself and your staff a favour. Contact your nearby Canada Manpower Centre for Students today and tell us what a student can do for you. It could be your opportunity of a summertime.

Carter Urges Easing Of Marijuana Penalty

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Carter administration Monday endorsed removing federal criminal penalties for possession of small amounts of marijuana, but said it should be left to the states to decide whether to decriminalize their own possessions laws.

Dr. Peter G. Bourne, director-designate of the office of drug abuse policy, said decriminalization "seems to have been an effective and appropriate approach" in the eight states that have dropped criminal penalties for simple possession so far.

But he emphasized, "It is the position of the administration that it should be left to the individual states to determine whether they wish to decriminalize ... and that the federal government should not seek in any way to influence that decision."

The federal penalty for possession of a small amount of marijuana, defined as one ounce or less, is levied under the Controlled Substances Act, which provides for up to one year in jail or a fine of up to $5,000, a fine which can be doubled for a second offence.

The federal law on simple possession has never been enforced, Bourne, the drug enforcement agency and the justice department testified Monday in hearings before the house select committee on narcotics abuse and control. Federal enforcement concentrates on distributors of large amounts.

The Carter administration does not intend to propose legislation, but is endorsing a bill "along the lines" of one introduced by Sens. Alan Cranston (Dem.—Calif.) and Jacob Javits (Rep.—N.Y.). It would decriminalize possession of an ounce or less, but would dimpose a civil fine of up to $100. Criminal penalties for the sale or distribution of even small amounts would not be affected.

Bourne said the criminal penalties for possession are "counter-productive" and "have resulted in otherwise law-abiding young people spending time in prison and incurring permanent damage to their careers and their ability to enter professions."

He said as many as 35 million Americans have tried marijuana and as many as 11 million are now using the drug at least weekly. The sixth annual report of the National Institute of Drug Abuse released last week said 15 million people used marijuana one or more times in the month preceding its survey.

Oregon, California, Minnesota, South Dakota, Colorado, Ohio, Vermont and Maine have decriminalized marijuana possession so far.

Bourne said the administration was also "carefully reviewing" its position on penalties for possession of cocaine, but declined to elaborate.

U.S. DIVORCE BOOM TAPERING OFF

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The divorce boom that began in the mid-1960s is tapering off although the number of divorces continues to rise, the government says.

The national centre for health statistics said in a provisional report Monday that an estimated 1,077,000 divorces last year was 51,000 more than in 1975, but the rate of increase was less than half the peak.

It said the average annual increase in the divorce rate was 11.5 per cent from 1968 to 1972; 7.3 per cent from 1972 to 1973; and about 4.5 per cent since then.

But both the annual number and rate of divorces have doubled since 1966, the report said.

The centre is an agency of the department of health, education and welfare.

Angry Goldwater Ready to Sue

United Press International

Sen. Barry Goldwater said today "I'm shocked and I'm resentful" about news stories alleging he condoned the presence of organized crime in Arizona, and he indicated he may sue.

"If this suit is brought, it will proably be the biggest ever brought in the history of the United States," he said.

Goldwater said his lawyers are looking at the stories.

The articles, written by a team of investigative reporters and editors, charged Goldwater and his brother, Robert, was friendly with mob figures who, the story said, were implicated in state corruption.

The team, Investigative Reporters and Editors Inc., consists of 36 reporters and editors from 25 newspapers and broadcast stations who looked into corruption in Arizona following the bombing murder last June of Arizona Republic reporter Don Bolles.

"I don't like to get in law suits," he said today on ABC's Good Morning America show.

'I've been in one on my life and I won it ... but I'm not going to allow my name to be besmirched by somebody from gand-ridden Long Island."

Goldwater referred to Bob Greene, a reporter for Newsday, a newspaper in Garden City, N.Y., team leader for the 36 reporters and editors who had worked on the series.

"I challenge him to bring up the name of one nationally known gangster in Arizona today," Goldwater said. "If they're there, I don't know about them."

"I'm a United States senator, I'm not in the legislature of Arizona," he said. "I'm not the governor. In fact I'm a Republican in a Democratic state. What can I do about it?"

In a third copyrighted article published today the investigative team said that:

—Harry Rosenzweig, Arizona businessman and Republican official who piloted Sen. Goldwater's rise to national prominence, maintains intimate ties with a Phoenix club owner identified by police as a contact man for the Chicago crime syndicate.

—Rosenzweig, who is a former Republican state chairman, has nurtured prostitution and gambling in Phoenix for years. A variety of sources have cited various instances of Rosenzweig's power-brokering in prostitution, gambling and the police agencies responsible for their enforcement.

—Rosenzweig has ties with mob-connected bookmakers and syndicate hoodlums who midwifed the birth of Las Vegas as the gambling capital of the nation. Rowenzweig denied influence in the gambling rackets and said his only connection with prostitution was "maybe twice" recommending prostitutes to friends as an accommodation.

—Rosenzweig's name has been found in prostitutes' "trick books," sometimes referred to as "The Diamond Man."

N-Fuel Deal

HAMILTON, Ont. (CP) — Westinghouse Canada Ltd. has received an order for more than $20 million worth of nuclear fuel for the Pickering and Bruce generating stations of Ontario Hydro. The 700 tons of nuclear fuel to be supplied represents the equivalent of 20 million tons of coal.

Kidnapping Charged Hanafi Head

WASHINGTON (WP) — Hamaas Abdul Khaalis, the Hanafi Muslim leader who led 11 gunmen last week in the capture of 124 hostages and the takeover of three Washington buildings, was officially booked Monday for armed kidnapping. Then he was again released to return home.

Khaalis, 56, arrived at police headquarters in a police car and was escorted into the building after he was picked up from his northwest Washington home.

Khaalis was set free on his own personal recognizance early Friday morning as part of the negotiated deal to release 124 hostages being held at the District of Columbia city hall, B'Nai B'rith international headquarters, and the Islamic Centre.

Eight other gunmen were ordered jailed — two on $75,000 bond each and six under $50,000 bond each. The remaining three gunmen, who had no prior arrest records, were also released without bond as personal recognizance.

In the bloody three-pronged takeover, one man was killed and several injured as the 12 Hanafi Muslims led by Khaalis moved in to the three buildings with guns and large knives.

The dead man was Marucie Williams, 24, a local radio news reporter, who was shot to death as he stepped off the elevator on the fifth floor of the District Building just as the takeover there began. Williams' funeral was held Monday.

U.S. Plains Dig Out After Big Blizzard

United Press International

Workers used metal detectors to spot cars buried under 25-foot snowdrifts on rural Colorado roads Monday and rescue helicopters combed the blizzard-buried plains for persons still marooned by snow.

Heavy rains and melting snow pushed rivers and streams over their banks in parts of New England and New York, forcing scattered evacuations.

A blizzard that swept the Rockies and Plains from Thursday to Saturday buried wide areas and left at least 18 persons dead.

Searchers requested metal detectors to find cars buried in deep drifts in Colorado's Calhan-Ellicott areas. Authorities said some farmers in the area were still snowbound.

Colorado, hardest hit by the storm, reported 10 deaths, including three children trapped in a field by the blizzard. Nebraska reported six storm deaths and South Dakota and Kansas each reported one.

Air rescue units of the Military Airlift Command and National Guard outfits flew mercy missions Monday, looking for marooned ranch families in distress or stray motorists still trapped along unopened roads.

Colorado Gov. Richard Lamm said he would ask his state's legislature to appropriate $150,000 to help isolated farmers clean up storm damage. But he said drought-dry counties received little moisture from the storm.

The Tri-State Generation and Transmission Association said employees were working around the clock to restore electricity to much of eastern Colorado.

Thousands of homes were without power today in northwestern Kansas and utility officials said it could take two weeks to restore power in some areas.

Kanorado, Kan., a town of about 250, was completely without electricity and phone service. Outages also were reported in the Goodland, Kan., area.

"We have people calling in to say 'I've got a home someone can share if they don't have electricity,'" said Goodland police dispatcher Robert Lamb.

Overflowing streams closed some roads in New York, Vermont, Maine, New Hampshire and Massachusetts.

A trailer park has evacuated in Milton, N.Y., several families were moved out of lowland homes in Waterford, N.Y., and about 25 families were forced from homes at the junction of the Baker and Pemigewasset rivers in New Hampshire. Scores of back roads in Vermont were impassable and many schools called off classes.

"There are trees 30-40 feet long and 10 feet in diameter shooting down the river like matchsticks," said Joseph White, whose house is on the banks of the rising Housatonic River in Gaylordsville, Conn.

Canada, U.S. to Swap Kickback Information

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada and the United States have signed an agreement under which their departments of justice can exchange information on possible Boeing aircraft kickbacks on Canadian sales.

The justice department said today the agreement allows the two departments to make available to each other "relevant information and material pertaining to the sales activities in Canada of the Boeing Co. subject to the limitations provided by the laws of each country."

It said the material will be used by law enforcement agencies to make any warranted investigation. The information would remain confidential unless used in legal proceedings.

All domestic laws of the two countries would be followed.

"The primary objective of this agreement is to facilitate a full investigation of the allegations made and to promote co-operation between th two countries towards this objective bearing in mind the territorial jurisdiction of each other."

The announcement comes two weeks after it was disclosed in Washington that sales of Boeing aircraft to Air Canada, the defence department, Nordair and Eastern Provincial Airlines will be looked at in connection with a Security Exchange Commission (SEC) investigation of possible kickbacks by Boeing from 1968 onwards.

Canadian government and Boeing officials have said the disclosure of the list containing these names does not mean any kickbacks were paid in Canada.

Canadian ministers said at the time that preliminary information indicated no wrongdoing. Prime Minister Trudeau said the United States embassy here and the Canadian embassy in Washington were asked to find if any Canadians were involved in kickbacks.

Defence Minister Barney Danson said all files concerning sales to defence had been put in a safe place where they could not be tampered with.

SAFE BASHERS GOT THOUSANDS

A weekend safecracking at Capital Iron and Metals, 1832 Store, netted thieves a substantial amount of cash but police have declined to say exactly how much was taken.

A police spokesman said today for security reasons the precise amount cannot be released but when pressed replied the loot totalled "a few thousand dollars."

The theft occurred sometime between 6 p.m. Saturday and 7 a.m. Monday.

The safe, located in the front of the store, was attacked with axes, sledgehammers, pry bars and wedges.

Police said it was more of a "safe-busting" than safe-cracking.

The door to the safe was damaged beyond repair.

B.C. Seeks Ottawa Funds For Family Legal Aid

The provincial government is hoping to persuade Ottawa to contribute to legal aid costs for family and civil legal matters, Attorney-General Garde Gardom said Monday.

Replying in the legislature to questions from Conservative leader Scott Wallace, Gardom said B.C., on behalf of all the provinces, is trying to negotiate a new legal aid agreement with the federal government.

Under the present agreement, Ottawa annually provides 75 cents per capita to B.C. to help defray legal aid costs in criminal matters.

Gardom said B.C. believes similar aid should be available to provide legal aid in family disputes and civil disputes in cases of need.

Gardom said, however, that he does not plan to become involved in the current dispute over legal aid funding for 1977-78.

The Legal Aid Society of B.C. has said it may have to cease operations before the end of th eyear because it has received a 16-per-cent cut in funding for the year.

The attorney-general said the cut was made by the Legal Services Commission, which he described as an independent body.

The commission receives money from the government and distributes it among various groups providing legal services to the public.

Driver Robbed

Two juveniles have been arrested and police are looking for a third in connection with the robbery of a Chinese-food delivery driver in Sidney.

A Sidney RCMP spokesman said the two aged 15 and 16, are expected to appear in family court this week charged with armed robbery.

Police said Paul Jody England, 18, of 8591 Lochside, was delivering an order to an address on Fifth Street in Sidney at 2 a.m. Saturday when three youths wearing nylon stockings over their faces attacked him.

The trio pushed England to the ground, beat him with a stick and grabbed his wallet containing $11. Before leaving they tore out the citizen band radio in England's car and took his keys.

'LAST HIRED, FIRST FIRED'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Federal New Democratic Party leader Ed Broadbent said Monday that briefs presented to NDP mini-caucus sessions on unemployment show that extremely high unemployment among women is taken for granted.

The briefs from women's groups in B.C. "have made it very clear to us that women are the last hired and first fired," said Broadbent.

He also said women in B.C. are "better organizeed and more assertive" than women on the east coast of Canada.

The NDP mini caucus received briefs in Vancouver, Nanaimo and Powell River while in B.C. Earlier, it received submissions at hearings in St. John's, Nfld., and Sydney, N.S.

Demands for government-subsidized dap care centres to help working women were made in three of the 14 briefs submitted in Vancouver to Broadbent, Stu Leggatt, NDP member of Parliament for New Westminster, and Les Benjamin, NDP member for Regina-Lake Centre.

Jobless Soars

Manitoba saw its jobless rate jump by nine-tenths of one per cent to a total of six per cent.

The jobless rate in Prince Edward Island rose by one-half of one per cent to nine per cent.

Although New Brunswick had the second-worst unemployment record at 13 per cent in February, its rate actually dropped by two-tenths of one per cent.

Quebec's jobless rate rose to 9.7 per cent in February, up seven-tenths of one per cent, but still short of the record 10.1 per cent rate of last October, just before the November election victory of the separatist Parti Quebecois.

Ontario, with the largest number of unemployed at 316,000, saw its jobless rate rise to 6.8 per cent, an increase of six-tenths of one per cent.

Saskatchewan had the lowest unemployment rate at 3.7 per cent, down two-tenths of one per cent from January.

Alberta's jobless rate decreased by three-tenths of one per cent to four per cent.

Quebec had 303,000 persons unemployed, British Columbia 103,000; Nova Scotia 42,000; Alberta 40,000; New Brunswick 37,000; Newfoundland 30,000; Manitoba 33,000; Saskatchewan 21,000 and P.E.I. 6,000. There are no figures for the Northwest Territories and the Yukon.

The council said it "deplores the haphazard manner in which federal, provincial and local levels of government deal with the problem and the prevailing public attitude which ranges from one of indifference and apathy to blaming youth themselves."

"The council is deeply concerned that major initiatives in the area of youth and employment will be discarded or held in abeyance because of general uncertainties about constitutional divisions of responsibility."

The council added that without quick action, the question of which jurisdiction is responsible might become irrelevant.

"In this context, an unemployment rate of 16 per cent among young people in Quebec in 1976—and likely to be even higher in the future—is ominous," it said.

The council said the statistics present an alarming picture but they do not convey "the individual frustrations and debilitating effects of a poor job market for young people."

The official unemployment rate is "only a partial indicator of malaise in terms of young people's unemployment prospects."

The monthly figures released by Statistics Canada only give minimal estimates because the survey eliminates "large numbers of young people who may need and want jobs, but are not actually looking for them."

"For example, it is known that many young people stay in the school system because jobs are unavailable or because they must build up credentials which are used to ration a limited number of jobs."

The council said there also is no calculation of underemployment—"the situation where a job is held, but which falls far short of wants or capabilities."

"Without job opportunities, the best training and counselling programs will be futile. Moreover, the lines of least resistance—such as efforts to lower young people's expectations or compulsory retirement of the older worker to help the younger worker—are likely to be alienating and divisive."

Instant Riches Under the Flap In New Lottery

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Coming next in British Columbia is the Instant Lottery, a craze that is sweeping the United States.

It is like Loto Canada or the Provincial, only faster.

And cheaper. At least in theory.

A customer pays 50 cents for a ticket and lifts the flap to find his number. Then he checks it against the numbers under sealed flaps labelled $10 and $100 and $1,000 and $10,000.

Some tickets even offer $50,000 on a 50-cent ticket, the fiscal equivalent of $100,000 for $1, offered by the Express.

If the buyer has a winning number he can get cash that day. If he has a losing ticket, he can buy another one.

And that's where the trouble lies.

A customer planning to buy only one ticket may just miss a big prize. He buys a second and a third. Before he knows it he could be out $20 without a win. money he had not planned to spend when he came into the shop.

The Instant Lottery can be hypnotic, like a slot machine. But just as much fun.

And that's why it is sweeping the country.

In the United States there will be Instant Lotteries before the end of this year every place where lotteries are legal. The Instant Lotteries are drawing all the money-and the steam is going out of the buy-and-wait system.

Instant Lotteries are also coming to Canada, probably starting in Quebec.

In British Columbia the Instant Lottery may be three years away.

"We want to study the effects of the Instant Lottery in other areas before we start one in British Columbia," says John Stewart, director of the B.C. Lotteries Branch.

"We don't want to rush into this thing, although it is certain that Instant Lotteries are on their way. They are extremely popular and they will come to British Columbia within two or three years."

The caution is not only a concern about the social implications of the Instant Lottery.

"There is, in addition, the feeling that we may have more lotteries than we need at the present time," Stewart said.

With Loto Canada and the Provincial four times a year and the dollar Express every two weeks the market is just about saturated.

But there are a number of small lotteries and draws operated by many service clubs and other non-profit organizations doing good work but flooding the lottery market, he said.

When there are too many of these things, people get annoyed, just as they did before the chairty drives merged into the United Appeal.

"Frankly, we would like to see service clubs take up the sale of the Provincial or Western Express tickets rather than run their own raffles — but it is entirely up to them to make their own decision. We feel the public would respond better if there were fewer raffles and a service club could sell the Provincial and the Express as a year-round project and not just once a year."

Lottery tickets earn 10 per cent of the price for the distributor.

All Provincial and Western Express tickets are distributed by the B.C. Lotteries Branch through non-profit organizations. Private enterprise gets into the act only at the retail level.

The government sells the $1 Express ticket to a non-profit organiztion for 80 cents and it in turn sells the ticket to retailers for 90 cents, where they are sold to the public for $1. Retailers are stores, booths or individuals.

The same formula of 10 per cent for everybody applies to the Provincial. The government sells the Provincial tickets to non-profit groups at $4, who in turn sell them to retailers at $4.50 and the public pays $5. The profit at each step is 50 cents.

Loto Canada works on a private enterprise basis and the commission is just under five per cent.

Hugh Currie and John Howell have the wholesale franchise for Vanocuver Island, operating out of their office at 2340 Douglas. Their only competitors are banks and trust companies which sell the tickets on a national basis.

Currie and Howell buy the tickets from Loto Canada at $9.10 each and sell them to retailers at $9.55 each.

"There isn't a great deal of money in this. You have to have a very high volume to make it pay," Currie said.

"We offer to buy back unsold tickets but we don't get many. Nobody wants to give up a ticket and later discover it was worth a million dollars. Most of the sellers are really gamblers at heart."

The prizes in a lottery are all awarded . . . but sometimes it takes a year.

Unclaimed money must be held in trust for a full 12 months. Then if unclaimed, it goes back into the pot and is distributed as extra prizes.

The percentage of unclaimed prizes is difficult to determine because of the long waiting period but is estimated to be about five per cent. One buyer holding a ticket worth $100,000 has still not claimed his prize in a drawing that took place six months ago. Either he has lost the ticket, forgotten about it or is no hurry for the money.

Loto Canada sells about 50,000 tickets on Vancouver Island for each draw, about 35,000 through the Currie-Howell shop and the other 15,000 through the banks and trust companies. About 200,000 are sold across the province.

By comparison, the Provincial sells 500,000 tickets in B.C. for each draw.

The big seller is the dollar Express which sells more than one million tickets in B.C. every two weeks.

All three lotteries will continue for at least two years. And then some changes will be made to make way for the Instant Lottery.

They're Coming On Fast

The "instant game" is spreading like wildfire in the U.S. and taking the steam out of the buy - and - wait lottery system.

John Stewart, director of the B.C. Lotteries Branch, is pictured with promotional material for the latest get-rich-quick schemes.

B.C. isn't going to rush into them but Stewart says it's certain they're on their way and they'll cut into conventional lotteries.

TOWN TALK

There's hardly a dull moment at Oak Bay United when Rev. Bill Z. Van Druten takes the pulpit.

The other Sunday, before a packed congregation, the minister cracked jokes, got boffo laughs and announced the birthday of an 86-year-old parishioner (he got a round of applause and a verse of Happy Birthday).

At one point the organist and choir ended their anthem in the middle of a verse, and Van Druten, who loves to sing, had to persuade them to finish it.

Meanwhile, a lady in the pews fainted (there was a doctor in the house), and a number of worshippers could be seen rolling their eyes heavenward.

Yes, Van Druten said, that was a bird they saw fluttering around the timbered vault, but not to worry; it had been living in the church a long time and showed no signs of leaving.

"I should tell you it's a bat, then you'd really worry—we've got bats in our belfry—but don't let that get around. There's people who already think that."

When the big float plane hit the waters of the Inner Harbor Sunday afternoon and suddenly pitched over on one wing bystanders thought they were watching a plane crash.

"It looked like one of their pontoons suddenly collapsed," said Capt. Karol Madera, of the Canadian Armed Forces, who was shore-side with his camera when the plane came down. "I thought they there in trouble."

Not to worry. An Airwest spokesman Monday said that was their plane coming in, and it's supposed to land that way. The plane was a converted Grumman Goose, a McKinnon turboprop flying boat that features retractable wing tip floats, and when it lands it dips over on either one or the other of its wings.

"If it didn't go over then we'd worry," said the Airwest representative.

A group of Victoria high school girls went to Vancouver Friday night to see the English rock group, Queen, but had to make do with seats about 60 feet away from the stage.

The next day they had better luck.

They were walking through Stanley Park when they spied John Deacon, Queen's bass guitarist, taking his wife and child to see the polar bears.

They followed at a respectful distance, discreetly taking pictures.

Finally, one of the group, Mary Philip, walked up to him.

"Aren't you John Deacon?" she asked.

He nodded.

"Well," she continued, "we came over from Victoria to watch you perform."

"That's very nice of you," he replied, "and we came over from London to play for you."

A tip of the Town Talk topper to the city parks department for improving the Dallas Road view for waterfront watchers.

The regulars had been grumbling about bushes in front of pathway benches obscuring the panorama. But nature's rambling ways have been curtailed, and the view once again is perfect—thanks to some sharp instruments and parks department brawn.

Astonishing's the word for the response to that provincial government contest to name the fast ferry service between the North Shore and downtown Vancouver.

The contest—being handled by Victoria's Truman Glover Advertising—has drawn an estimated 100,000 entries.

The winner will get a free lifetime pass on the commuter ferry, will be named an honorary captain of the service and will be invited to attend the inaugural ceremony to kick off the service.

More Money Approved For Centre

Victoria aldermen today recommended the allocation of an additional $94,000 from Victoria West's Neighborhood Improvement Program fund toward the construction of the proposed community centre in Banfield Park.

City council's NIP and housing committee was apparently influenced by arguments that the extra money would protect the flat, usable areas of the park and also save the city money on building maintenance.

Originally $340,000 had been set aside for the project, but the committee chairman Ald. John Hayes explained that the estimate envisaged construction on a level site.

To build the centre on more rocky land unsuitable for park purposes would cost another $8 per square foot or an additional $50,000, he said.

Construction of the bulk of the building in brick, for durability, would increase the price by about another $4 per square foot.

Vic West NIP representative Mrs. Kay Woods told the committee that another 525 square feet was required — making the total area 6,525 square feet — to provide sufficient space for the general activities area.

The extra $94,000 will be taken from the Vic West program's land acquisition fund.

Said Hayes: "I am satisfied that this project should go ahead as quickly as possible."

Book Loss Punishment Ruled Out

Greater Victoria school board Monday defeated a motion by Trustee Mark Fisher that would have made individual schools responsible for paying for library book thefts.

The annual cost for replacing stolen books is about $60,000, but the majority of trustees felt all students would be punished for the actions of a few if each school had to replace books with funds designated for other school activities.

Trustee Daphne Temple asked Fisher why he is concerned only with library books. "Why not art supplies? There's no limit to the witch hunt you could go into."

But Fisher said putting the onus on individual schools to be responsible for their own losses might encourage them to prevent losses.

He questioned the accuracy of the reported losses at individual schools in light of statements made by one school librarian that loss reports may have to be falsified if Fisher's motion passed.

K. W. Adsett, librarian at Oak Bay junior and chairman of the Victoria school librarians association, wrote to the board:

"As Dr. Fisher's motion now stands, it will force the school librarian into the position of preparing false inventory reports to cover this type of loss."

Fisher said at the meeting he was angered by Adsett's suggestion because it intimated retaliation.

"This sounds like a threat," he said.

Trustee Peter Bunn said book loss is simply shoplifting and Fisher's motion would create a situation where others would suffer for the stealing of a few.

He compared it to honest people paying more for goods at retail stores because the stores had to build shoplifting losses into their prices.

A breakdown showed losses ranged from virtually no thefts at one school to an average of almost one book per student at another school last year.

Speeders Zapped Coming or Going

Traffic radar that can get you coming or going is in use by the RCMP on Capital Region highways and it is proving quicker, easier and less intimidating than the hand-held radar gun.

A dashboard-mounted instrument only 10 inches by 2½ inches, the unit registers speed in miles per hour of either an approaching or receding vehicle, whether or not the police car is moving.

Staff Sgt. Les Harper, divisional traffic officer, said the chief advantage of the machine is its manoeuvrability.

He said the CMI Speedgun IV, which clips easily to a patrol car dashboard, enables a patrol constable to check traffice speeds and direct his attention to other police work at the same time.

"It has excellent range and can cover an entire detachment area, including places where it is difficult to mount a stationary traffic check point," Harper said.

Earlier types of highway radar, which remain in use, include the side window-mounted cylindrical models resembling a spotlight, and the hand-held sort looking like a big Very pistol when pointed at an oncoming driver.

Both require the operator's patrol car to be stationary, parked at a roadside vantage point with a clear field of view.

On the Speedgun IV, an instant digital readout of a subject vehicle's speed in miles an hour appears on the left side of the instrument, simultanous with the police car's speed shown on the right side of the panel.

The operator can fix the numbers to remain visible by pressing a button, enabling him to make notes of the time, place and speed or to ilustrate to a violator just how fast he was going.

Four of the instruments, which cost about $3,000 each, are circulating among B.C. detachments. One was used about three weeks at Colwood and has move to the Sidney-North Sannich area.

Sgt. Al Tomlins of Sidney said the radar was being used for the first time there since it was obtained by the RCMP last June.

It is "a good machine," he said, noting there are only a limited number of spots suitable for setting up a conventional radar checkpoint, and these are soon known to regular travellers.

"This gives total mobility because it can be put in any car, marked or unmarked."

He expected the unit would have "quite an impact on the motoring public, especially the driver who is continually abusing the laws."

It would also be effective off the highway in monitoring traffic in the village of Sidney, Tomlins said.

Theoretically, Speedgun IV could also be used aloft, from the RCMP helicopter. Its ability to clock speeds is effective up to 190 m.p.h., with accuracy of one mile an hour when car-mounted.

Feds Take Hard Line Against Quebec Role

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government is continuing a tough policy of refusing to give Quebec's separatist government any special status on Canadian delegations going to international conferences.

External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson made that clear in the Commons Monday when asked about a conference of French-language education ministers in Brussels shortly.

The minister said negotiations are in progress with Quebec on the makeup of the Canadian delegation and added that Quebec got no more than other provinces on a delegation going to the United Nations water conference in Argentina this week.

Later an external affairs department spokesman said that the federal government has been informed by Quebec Education Minister Jacques-Yvon Morin that he will not be chairman of the Canadian delegation.

The spokesman said it has been a tradition since 1969 for a Quebec minister to preside over the delegation, adding that if Morin continues to refuse to preside the federal government will name Lucien Lamoureux, former Speaker in the Commons who now is ambassador in Brussels, as delegation leader.

He said negotiations are continuing on the makeup of the delegations which will have representatives from New Brunswick, Ontario and Manitoba.

The federal government is also making clear that members of the Canadian delegations, whether to the education conference or the water conference, will speak as Canadians, although they will no doubt note in their speeches that they are from certain provinces and thus are experts on what goes on there.

In both cases Quebec has sought a status that would make them different from the other provinces attending.

INDEPENDENCE LOSING IN BICYCLE POLL

QUEBEC (CP) — With only one week left to vote in the referendum on Quebec's independence, it looks as if the federalists have it and some lucky voter will take home a bicycle.

Voting has been light. Only 1,351 persons, or about .035 per cent, have voted out of a total of 4,023,743 registered voters.

A total of 1,018, or about 75 per cent, have voted to keep Quebec in Canada while 333 have voted to separate.

Another couple of hundred votes are expected before balloting ends this week.

The referendum has been conducted for the last seven weks by La Patrie.

For 40 cents, readers can find out about the progress of the referendum. They can also be clued in on the benefits of aluminum siding, the fact that Jackie Kennedy Onassis will never get an ambassador's job from Jimmy Carter and that a Parti Quebecois minister was paid an "unbelievable" salary as a CBC employee before the election.

The results will not be "renewed federalism" or separation from Canada, but a drawing for a couple of bicycles, radios and some attache cases each containing three bottles of apple cider.

CBC PROBE SLAMMED

MONTREAL (CP) — The union representing 2,500 CBC broadcasters and technicians says allegations of separatist bias in CBC newscasts is a slap at freedom of information and an "evident threat to the democracy of this country."

A forthcoming inquiry by the Canadian Radio-television and Communications Commission into tyhe charges is an "unjustifiable attempt to meddle in the normal operation of the CBC," the National Association of Broadcast Employees and Technicians said Monday in a telegram to Prime Minister Trudeau.

The telegram, signed by union president Jean Benoit, accused members of the Trudeau government of trying "to influence public opinion by airing all sorts of groundless declarations" about views on separatism held by CBC employees.

Copies of the telgram were sent to Opposition Leader Joe Clark, NDP leader Ed Broadbent, CBC president A. W. Johnson and CRTC president Harry Boyle.

NWT Miners Drinking 'Condemned' Water

YELLOWKNIFE (CP) — Workers at Giant Yellowknife Mines Ltd. are expected to drink and shower in water from a bay condemned by the city of Yellowknife, a federal hearing into arsenic pollution was told Monday.

The water is taken from Back Bay, just northeast of the city, where signs warn: "Drinking of or bathing in these waters may be dangerout to yonr heauth."

Indian families living along the bay have been urged repeatedly not to use the water because it is believed to contain arsenic, cyanride, human waste and other contaminants.

"Why should the employees of Giant mines be subjected to having to drink and shower in this water?" the hearing was asked in a brief from the Canadian Association of Smelter and Allied Workers.

The union represents most of the workers at Giant's gold mining and smelting operation.

The brief said the company reports that the water is tested daily and also that on most days it contains less arsenic than the city's own water supply.

However, it questioned whether the testing is done properly and said that during spring runoff, the Back Bay water is bound to contain higher-than-normal levels of arsenic.

The hearing is the first of a series into the controversy over arsenic pollution in this northern capital.

"I think it's the ultimate insult for men to have to drink that water," said W. Z. Gower, a Giant worker who missed a shift to attend the hearing. He spoke as an individual after the union made its presentation.

Gower said it is a habit in the mill for workers to eat on their jobs in areas where arsenic dust is present.

"I've seen sandwiches with big black fingerprints on them." Tests by his physician done three weeks ago show he has arsenic levels above acceptable standards and if Giant cannot improve working conditions, it should be forced to shut down, he said.

Another worker, Dennis Thorne, said dizziness and rashes have forced him from his job at Giant. His doctor warned him not to work at Giant and he has been off the job for six weks without pay or compensation.

"As a result, my wife and family have moved out of Yellowknife. They don't want me to work at Giant."

The union also said government and industry are keeping arsenic pollution information confidential.

A similar complaint was made by the United Steelworkers of America, which represents some Giant workers and those employed at Con Mine, Yellowknife's other gold operation.

The USWA said there has been a systematic attempt over the years to cover up and belittle arsenic problems here.

"It would be relatively easy to develop a conspiracy theory involving governments and industry covering up health information," the Northwest Territories Council of the union said in a brief to the inquiry.

When politicians are confronted with controversy, decisions are made that are politically expedient and "if that means a cover-up, it will be done," the union said.

'We believe the Yellowknife arsenic situation to be such a case."

The council presented the inquiry with 24 recommendations ranging from the posting of hazard signs in mine operations to complete medical surveys of all mine workers.

Many of the recommendations dealt with on-the-job protective equipment and procedures.

Amnesty Urged For Illegals

OTTAWA (CP — Proposed changes to the Immigration Act will only be successful if they are implemented with humanity and compassion, a New Democratic Party MP said Monday as he urged the government to start as new amnesty program for illegal immigrants.

John Gilbert told the Commons during debate on amendments to the 1952 Act that the "number one problem in the field of immigration is the illegal immigrant.

With other opposition MPs, he criticized the government for leaving much of the specific changes to the act up to regulations to be set by cabinet.

Many major revisions to the law will not be available to Parliament to discuss, he said.

Gilbert said an estimated 400,000 immigrants in Canada without legal status should be given a chance to clear up their situation. The government should declare an amnesty for persons who come forward similar to a program in 19973, he said.

That year, about 50,000 immigrants who had been in the country illegally came forward to ask for landed immigrant status.

Rehabilitation Rapped As Jail System Priority

OTTAWA (CP) — Continued emphasis on rehabilitation as the major goal of the federal prison system will mislead not only the public but the offenders and everyone in the criminnal justice field, a five-man committee says in a report on the development of an integrated corrections system.

"By implying that the offender is 'sick' through causes beyond his control, this approach minimizes the offender's responsibility for his own criminal behavior," says the report made public Monday by Solicitor-General Francis Fox.

"The approach gives correctional offenders a strong inducement to employ coercion in the guise of humane treatment, and to enforce participation in treatment programs as a requisite to release,"

The committee proposes that the "opportunities principle," based on the assumption that the offender is responsible for his behavior, be adopted instead.

"This approach further recognizes that the offender is convicted and sentenced on the basis of his criminal behavior, not on the basis of some underlying personality disorder or deprived socio-economic condition."

The report sets out the principles and tasks for the proposed federal corrections agency, which will incorporate the Canadian Penitentiary Service and the National Parole Service.

Fox said he endorses the central themes of the report.

KJELDSEN REMANDED

CALGARY (CP)—Christian Kjeldsen, 27, was remanded to Friday when he appeared in provincial court Monday on a charge of first-degree murder.

The remand was the second for the man who was handcuffed and under police guard.

The charge was laid after city taxi driver Glenda Ferster vanished Feb. 23 after leaving the city for Banff, Alta., with an unidentified male passenger.

The body of the 20-year-old woman was found March 1 near Exshaw, Alta., about 60 miles west of here.

Kjeldsen was arrested in Victoria two weeks ago.

'Too Few Mailmen' After Hiring Freeze

EDMONTON (CP) — Postmaster-General Jean-Jacques Blais was met Monday by an angry group of residents who complained about lack of service in the Edmonton area of Mill Woods.

Resident John White led a demonstration outside the hotel where Blais spoke at a lunch meeting.

Three of the demonstrators met with Blais but he told them he could not set a date for starting mail delivery because the post office has a freeze on hiring and there are too few postmen to go around.

He told the Edmonton Direct Mail Marketing Association that private communications and deliverty services have taken much business from the post office, especially during labor disputes, but the post office still offers more service than other methods.

He said 90 per cent of first-class mail between major centres is delivered the day after it is mailed and only two per cent of such deliveries take more than two days.

PROBER WITHDRAWS

Vancouver lawyer Peter Butler, appointed as a commissioner to examine charges of bribery and intimidation of a Vancouver regional prosecutor, has withdrawn from the appointment, Premier Bill Bennett said Monday.

Butler was to examine allegations by Gil McKinnon, a Vancouver prosecutor, that he was offered a pay increase of 33.3 per cent and told he wouldn't receive any ad hoc work from the B.C. government, after he returns shortly to private law practice, if he talked to the press about a so-called crisis in the Vancouver prosecutors' office.

The statements were published in a Vancouver newspaper. McKinnon said the person who made the offer was another prosecutor.

Butler withdrew from the commission because he learned there is a possibility that an employee of one of his firm's clients may be called to testify.

Thomas Kemp Fisher, a New Westminster lawyer, will replace Butler. The hearing begins Friday in Vancouver.

Leadership Lacking On Kitimat: Skelly

Many British Columbians will be looking to the provincial government for leadership during the upcoming public hearings on the proposed Kitimat pipeline, but will not get it, Bob Skelly (NDP—Alberni) said Monday.

Skelly asked Energy Minister Jack Davis in the legislature if the government would formulate a position on the proposed Kitimat pipeline before hearings begin in mid-April.

Davis said the government will be listening to the hearings but will make a formal submission to the national energy board which has the final word in approving or ejecting the proposal.

He said it would be wrong to finalize the government's position before the public hearings are completed.

The hearings will provide the necessary public opinion, he said, adding, "certainly the government will have a position."

Skelly said outside the legislature the government should have an open mind about the pipeline, but should also have a fairly firm position to place before the commission, headed by Andrew Thompson, former chairman of the B.C. Energy Commission.

Environment Minister Jim Nielsen has indicated that studies concerning the pipeline are inadequate, Skelly said, and the government and its Environment and Land Use Secretariat should thoroughly examine the proposal before the hearings begin.

There has been tremendous opposition to the proposal due to the danger of oil spills from tankers travelling B.C.'s west coast and the government should be prepared to offer leadership to those groups which wish to appear before the Thompson commission, he said.

In Vancouver, Thompson said every aspect of oil tanker traffic along Canada's west coat would be scrutinized during his inquiry.

He said that he would conduct a complete, fair and fully open inquiry, including examination of the size, design, operation and proposed routes of tankers.

Thompson said the preliminary hearings would identify the public interest groups, municipal authorities and private companies that wish to make submissions to the inquiry.

The preliminary hearings will determine the inquiry's budget, he said, adding that the federal government is prepared to consider funding private intervenors.

Thompson said he may even rule out Kitimat as the best docking facility for the west coast oil port and urge Ottawa to examine another site instead.

He said he hopes to conclude public hearings by the end of this summer and file his report well before the end of the year.

He added that dates and places for the hearings—probably to be held in Vancouver, Victoria, Kitimat and Prince Rupert — will be decided and made public as soon as possible.

Homemaker Test Affects Few

Human Resources Minkster Bill Vander Zalm said Monday few elderly persons are affected by a means test for homemaker services.

The test has been required since last year but is only just being put into effect in an attempt to put all the elderly on equal footing, Vander Zalm said.

Those able to afford it would pay more than those less well off, he said, but negotiations are underway with Ottawa in an attempt to make the plan less costly for all.

Vander Zalm's comments followed a report that Mincome recipients would be "hit most unfairly" when the changes commence after April 1.

Isabel Kimmitt, assistant to Deputy Minister John Noble, said the means test takes into account assets and needs for daily living and persons who would suffer undue hardships would be exempt from the homemaker charges.

Kimmit was specifically referring to an anonymous couple quoted in newspaper reports as saying their homemaker fees would increase to $134 a month from $10.

She said all cases would be reviewed.

DETAILS SOON ON PHARMACARE

Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm said Monday he hopes to announce details of the new universal Pharmacre program within a few weeks.

He said he has had final meetings with pharmacists and doctors on the new program," not to tell them what we're doing but to ask them where they feel improvements are to be made."

The throne speech Jan. 13 said the province's Pharmacare program, which provides free prescription drugs to senior citizens and handicapped people, will be expanded to cover all residents.

The changes might not need to be done by legislation, the minister said, and "we are looking to see if it can be done by regulation."

Welcome Industry Or Else: Phillips

British Columbians must welcome industrial progress if they want to avoid scaring businesses out of the province, Economic Development Minister Don Phillips said Monday.

Phillips said his department is working on making B.C. more saleable to businesses in the hopes of encouraging them to remain in the province.

Phillips commented after Charles Barber (NDP—Victoria) asked in the legislature how many jobs had been lost and how many businesses had moved to Washington since Dec. 22, 1975, the date the Social Credit government took office.

Outside the legislature Phillips said economic development will wind up in the communities which welcome it.

Asked if there is generally an anti-development attitude in B.C., the minister replied that the public is well informed of the feeling in some communities about development and there is no need for him to offer further comment.

There has been a noticeable anti-expansion attitude in some parts of B.C., he said, and some communities have put up roadblocks which hamper developments.

Alberta and Washington are concentrating efforts on removing unnecessary red tape to allow for economic development, Phillips said, and, as a result, they have created more desirable climates for industry.

Housing Act Amended

Amendments aimed at tightening and increasing some of the powers under the Department of Housing Act were introduced in the legislature Monday.

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis said the proposed changes are housekeeping measures.

One of the proposed changes gives the minister the power to secure repayment of money advanced under the act by allowing for a certificate to be filed in the land registry office.

Another amendment provides the minister with wider powers to delegate who may represent and sign housing documents for him.

Plywood Mill Here to Stay

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

Victoria plywood plant of British Columbia Forest Products is celebrating its silver anniversary and manager Jim Warr says it should be good for at least another 25 years.

Warr graduated from University if B.C. in mechanical engineering in 1950 and was hired by BCFP to construct a veneer plant up-Island at Youbou. Later that year he was sent to Victoria to help design a plywood mill near the sawmill.

WARR
. . . mill to stay

The first plywood came through the mill in February, 1952, 25 years ago.

"It is hard to know what the future holds," Warr said, "but I think the plywood mill will still be here 25 years from now. If anyone is still in the plywood business, BCFP will be in it, too, you can be sure of that.

"We are doing our best to cope with the vagaries of the market and we are looking forward to a long stay. BCFP is committed to staying in Victoria."

Not that the decision was easy.

There have been pressures from environmentalists and company concerns about a lack of space for expansion.

"We carefully considered the possibility of moving outside Victoria and rejected the idea. There are too many negative factors," Warr said.

"We have a stable work force here. If we moved to a smaller community the population would be more transient and keeping good workers would be difficult.

"In addition, pollution control requirements apply everywhere in B.C., even the boondocks. We can't run away from the problem. We have to stay here and make our mills attractive for the community. I think we have made a good deal of progress over the past 25 years eleminating dust and smoke and noise."

As for the lack of room for expansion. the company will just have to find a way, Warr said.

Meanwhile, its most urgent problem is trying to cope with a flood of imported U.S. plywood at prices below the prevailing Canadian level.

"There is no question the Americans have gained a large share of the market. Their plants are much bigger than ours so they have the economies of scale. In addition, their market has been in a recession in the United States so they can afford to sell cheaply in Canada in order to market their product."

He said B.C. prodicers have considered — and rejected — turning out lower grades of plywood to compete with U.S. prices.

"We have built up a reputation for quality and we want to protect it. We will just have to try to oversome the U.S. imports with a better product."

However, Warr said the battle could not go on indefinitely, under present conditions, without some B.C. companies being forced to close up shop.

"All sorts of industries receive protection and the time may come when governments will have to begin thinking in terms of subsidies or higher tariffs to protect local producers."

The present tariff is 15 per cent, but U.S. prices are so low the Americans are able to absorb the cost and still undercut the Canadian prices.

Warr, 54, is manager of both the plywood plant, which has 320 employees, and the sawmill, which has 500.

After constructing plants in Youbou and Victoria, he was plant engineer at Victoria until 1959, when he was transferred to head office in Vancouver. Then he became manager at the Hammond mill before starting the circle again.

He was transferred to Youbou where he was manager for seven years before being moved back to Victoria, which was like coming home.

"As far as the future of the plywood mill is concerned, it is difficult to look forward 25 years. It seems like a long time from now. However, when I look back 25 years, it doesn't seem like such a long time. It is easy too review the past but one one really knows what's going to happen even 25 minutes from now."

Melchers Distillery Goes Into Bankruptcy

MONTREAL (CP) — The board of directors of Melchers distilleries Ltd. has turned the company over to a trustee under the provisions of the bankruptcy act, company president Ian Wilson-Smith said in a statement.

He said the company had been having financial problems "for some time," and that the board of directors had initiated bankruptcy proceedings after it become apparent during negotiations for a financial restructuring that Melchers could no longer meet its obligations.

The trustee, Richard Messier, a partner of Clarkson, Gordon and Co., will operate the company on behalf of the creditors for a time in an attempt to solve the company's financial problems.

The Robal Bank of Canada, Melchers' bankers, "have indicated a willingness to work with us," Wilson-Smith said.

A spokesman for the bank said the Royal had held discussions with Melchers and agreed to "go along with this particular action."

The Quebec-based company, established in 1898, employs about 160 employees, of whom 122 work at the main distillery in Berthierville, 40 miles northeast of Montreal.

Melchers' second distillery in Minnedosa, Man., was closed in 1973.

Melchers markets a full range of domestic spirits, exports bulk Canadian whisky to the U.S. and acts as agent for a number of averseas suppliers of wines and spirits.

"Our primary concerns are and will remain the continuance of jobs for our employees and the fulfillment of our responsibilities to our customers, our creditors, the communities of Berthierville and Minnedosa and to our shareholders," Wilson-Smith said.

Melchers reported a loss of $2.8 million in 1975. Sales for the same period were $9.8 million.

FORD RECALLS TRUCKS FOR BOLT REPAIRS

DETROIT (AP) — The Ford Motor Co. has ordered the recall of about 2,500 1976-model medium and heavy-duty trucks and bus chassis for replacement of four bolts which connect front axles to front springs.

Twenty-two of the trucks are in Canada, a Ford of Canada spokesman said.

The vehicles were built at Ford's Kentucky Truch plant between April 1 and July 31, 1976, the company said Tuesday.

Models affected by the recall include medium and heavy F-, LN and B-series trucks and bus chassis. Ford said each of the units has a 7,000 or 9,000-pound front axle and air brakes. The LN-series trucks are equipped with manual steering.

Ford officials said until the bolts are replaced, operators of the recalled vehicles should check daily the four U-bolts which secure the front axle to the front springs. If a cracked or broken bolt is found, the part should be replaced before the vehicle is used.

Ford said it has received no reports of accidents or injuries because of the problem. The bolts will be replaced free of charge.

Loan Backed With Gold

KUALA LUMPUR (AP) — A Malaysian bank has started making loans of up to $2,000 with gold jewelry as collateral in what it says is an effort to help the common Malaysian with his money problems.

Asian families frequently keep their savings in the form of such jewelry.

V. Krishnasamy, manager of the United Asian Bank, said experts would appraise prospective borrowers' holdings for $1. The bank will lend up to 80 per cent of the jewelry's value for educational, domestic and medical expenses, he said.

Krishnasamy said the loans would extend up to 24 months at one per cent interest on the outstanding balance, compounded monthly. Gold bullion, coins and jewels would not be accepted as collateral.

Debbie and Philip Voted Top Athletes

AWARD WINNERS at 10th annual Greater Victoria Sports Celebrity Dinner Monday night at Empress Hotel were, left to right, gymnast Philip Delesalle, 18, male athlete-of-year; track star Debbie Scott, 19, female athlete-of-year; and Bob Cool, captain of McDonalds' lacrosse team, Canadian junior Minto Cup champions, who were namedo team-of-year.

The accent was on youth when the coveted athletic awards were handed but Monday at the 10th annual Victoria Sports Celebrity Dinner.

Philip Delesalle, Canada's premier gymnast at the age of 18, was named Victoria's male athlete of the year.

Debbie Scott, a petite 19-year-old whose shyness almost hides her power on the track, was honored as the female athlete of the year.

And the charge by youth continued when Victoria McDonalds, winner of the Canadian junior lacrosse championship, was declared team of the year.

Then it was the turn of Joan Munroe and George Dean, whose combined length of service towards youth exceeds 50 years, to step forward.

Now entering his 30th year as a track and field coach, the mild-mannered Dean was voted the sportsman of the year.

Mrs. Munroe, visibly surprised, was honored with the Kiwanis distinguished service award for her efforts in lacrosse for the past 23 years.

All choices drew resounding applause from another packed gathering in the Empress Hotel ballroom. Deservedly so, but none of the selections were as easy as they may have seemed.

Delesalle, in becoming the second gymnast in 10 years to win the male athlete honor, won out over lacrosse star Kevin Alexander and soccer's Bob Bolitho.

Delesalle's selection marks the first time a sport has been duplicated in the male poll. Rick Johnson, the 1969 winner, was the first to bring gymnastics into the spotlight. In the other eight years, however, different sports have been represented.

Delesalle, who competed and won the pommel-horse event in New York's Madison Square Garden at the weekend and arrived in Victoria only hours before the dinner, swept the provincial and Canadian championships in 1976 to become the country's top male gymnast.

He performed brilliantly in international meets. He placed 22nd out of a field of 90 in the Summer Olympics in Montreal to record the highest finish ever accomplished by a Canadian.

While Delesalle ended the wide distribution of sports represented in the male poll, Miss Scott continued track and field's domination of the female athlete of the year.

A graduate of Claremont, now attending University of Victoria, dark-haired Debbie is the sixth runner to win the female award on 10 years.

Provincial high school and junior champion at 1,500 and 3,000 metres during the past two years, she became the Canadian junior champion at those distances last year.

The petite Miss Scott won out over tennis star Wendy Barlow and volleyball-basketball standout Shelley Godfrey.

McDonalds drew the nod of the selectors over James Bay Athletic Association's powerful rugby team and Victoria West, a soccer team that celebrated its club's 80th anniversary in 1976 by winning the national title.

It marks the second time Victoria's Western Canada Major Junior League entry has won. McDonalds claimed the team trophy in 1972.

The manner in which Macs came back in their league playoffs may have helped sway the voters. With an injured Alexander only seeing limited duty in the semi-finals against New Westminster, McDonalds came back from the brink of elimination to win the seventh and deciding game.

It was the same story in the final against Burnaby Cablevision. Trailing in the series, three games to one, Victoria again recovered to win the seventh game.

In the national playoff for the Minto Cup, Macs won a best-of-seven series from Bramalea, Ont., in four straight.

The dinner, sponsored jointly by the Greater Victoria Sports Council and Kiwanis Club of Saanich was a success for the 10th straight year.

Proceeds from the dinner will go to Kiwanis charities in aid of crippled children.

Adding to the night's success was an impressive array of guest speakers, including Vic Rapp, the new B.C. Lions' head coach; Victoria-reared Dave Cutler; former Toronto Maple Leaf player-turned-TV-analyist Howie Meeker; hydroplane champion Bill Muncey of San Diego, and Graham Leggatt, a former Scoatish international soccer player, and now general manager of the Carling O'Keefe Sports Foundation.

AWARD SPOTLIGHT HITS 'QUIET' COACH

GEORGE DEAN

The quiet, publicity-shunning coaching veteran of Victoria track and field circles was suddenly propelled into the spotlight Monday night.

George Dean, a former Edmonton resident who has been instructing young athletes for 40 years, the last 30 in Victoria, was honored during the 10th annual Victoria Sports Celebrity Dinner at the Empress Hotel.

The 70-year-old founder of the Mercuries Track Club received the Sportsman-of-the-Year Award at the event that annually pays tribute to members of the Victoria-area sports family for athletic excellent and contributions to the community.

Like so many others involved in coaching, Dean spends a remarkable amount of time with his athletes. However, over the years things like his insistence on placing the welfare of his charges above winning and his adherence to the principles of fairness have made the word "sportsman" seem almost a part of his personality.

Compassion and dedication to his runners are just some of the many things George combines with knowledge in his pursuit of excellence as a track coach. He is both a friend and a teacher who avoids attempts to stimulate by intimidation, preferring to inspire his athletes by carefully-planned training, by building confidence and by his obvious coaching ability.

That ability is such that he has twice been named coach of Canada's junior team and was selected in 1975 as British Columbia's "coach of the year."

Dean refuses to push youthful athletes too hard, believing they can be "burned out" before reaching what should be their best years. He also limits membership in his track club to 16 because he feels he could not spend enough time with each member if he had more.

Even for a man decades his junior, the amount of time George devoted to his labor of love is surprising.

In the winter months he holds workouts four days per week. In the summer, his schedule calls for a training session every day. It has been said that he is an amateur volunteer with professional methods.

Dean works with stop watches, measuring devices, strings and markers as he studies his runners and attempts to understand their capabilities and to produce improvement. Along the way he continually updates performance charts on all his Mercuries as he prepares them for competition.

Before important events he does considerable "homework" on probable opponents, noting their abilities and usual tactics so that his contestants will have better ideas of what to expect in races.

Always willing to share his knowledge and his theories with other coaches and athletes from other clubs, George has also become an expert at finding means of transportation for youngsters who might otherwise miss opportunities to compete at meets away from Victoria.

It is all part of the coaching story of George Dean, who has given much of himself in order that others could be richer, athletically; and the standing ovation he received Monday night at the Empress was Victoria's way of saying "thank you."

TRAINING KEEPS STAR FROM DINNER

LONDON (AP) — Aston Villas Andy Gray has been named England's Soccer Player of the Year by the Professional Footballers' Association. But Greay was to busy training to receive the award at a London dinner Sunday night.

Villa will be playing Everton in the English League Cup final on Wednesday night and Villa manager Ron Saunders ordered special trainiing and no social engagements for anybody.

Skating Record

MOSCOW (Reuter — Sergei Marchuk of the Soviet Union became the first speed skater to break through the four-minute barrier when he set a world record Friday of 3:56.65 for the 3,000-metre event during competition for the Soviet Cup at Alma Ata.

The 'Good' Comes Back To the Lady President

bill walker

It was Joan Munroe's father who once told her: "If you ever get a chance to do any good in this world, do it. It will come back to you one day in some way."

That was many years ago, but Monday night much of that good came back for Joan at the 10th annual Greater Victoria Sports Celebrity Dinner at the Empress Hotel.

Joan Munroe, who otherwise is known as the lady president of the Greater Victoria Box Lacrosse Association, was honored as the 1977 winner of the Kiwanis Distinguished Service Award for sport.

That honor was richly deserved and well earned, for Joan is just about the best friend the sport of lacrosse has in this town.

This is her 23rd year of service with the GVBLA, which would be a fine record of service for anyone. But for a woman, it must be something else again. And it's doubtful if that record can be matched anywhere in the country.

During that time, Joan has done just about everything in lacrosse — coach, manager, referee, scorekeeper, publicity director, program seller, statistician. You name it. She's done it.

And she has never allowed herself to be pressured or overwhelmed because of her sex by mere males either. She has fought for what she has believed in; and everybody knew her policy.

★ ★ ★

"Oh, I've had my battles," she once said. "But it was always for the sport. I would have my say. The others would have theirs. Then it would be over and done with; and you'd get off your backside and get the job done."

In her youth on North Pender Island there weren't enough boys to go around when it came to lacrosse. So Joan was drafted. Willingly. "The boys really used to hammer me," she recalled.

She also played basketball and softball. Later, when her husband, Charles, coached the Eagles minor soccer team, she got deeply involved in that sport. Three times their team got to the final of the Sun Tournament of Champions. Three times they lost, once on corner kicks.

"I've always loved to help kids," is her philosophy. And it was through an association with the late Doug Fletcher in the old dust bowl at Stevenson Park that that interest in lacrosse was nurtured.

Naturally, there was another association that counted, and still does. Her son, Bill, coach of McDonalds, came up through the minor lacrosse ranks, starred with the Shamrocks and reached his zenith last year when he coached McDonalds to the Minto Cup Junior Canadian championship.

It was one of the happiest moments of Joan's life because of the relationship with the coach but equally so for the team because she, with Bill, had been with the club since the start.

★ ★ ★

These were mostly her boys. "We started those kids," she once recalled, "many of them as bantams" . . . but she plays no favorites. "They have all been great," she said.

And where could Joan be found during the national junior final at Esquimalt? Up in the stands in her executive seat enjoying what up to then was probably her proudest moment? No way. She was down in the scorer's box, where she belonged. Where else!

But that's been her pattern. There is no way work would interfere with pleasure. She was in the bakery business for 16 years and later operated a fish and chip establishment on Menzies Street. That took care of the working days. Lacrosse simply took care of the rest.

Next week, or maybe even this week, it will be the same story. Joan Munroe will knock on a door and ask for some help for the Greater Victoria Box Lacrosse Association, or maybe try to sell an ad in the program. And she likely will.

But her biggest reward, until now? That's when she happens to bump into a former player and he says "hi, Mom Munroe."

That, to her, is more of that good coming back, just as her father said it would; and which Victoria shared with her Monday night.

Cougars Must Change Plans

New Westminster Bruins have changed their minds and Victoria Cougars have been forced into making new arrangements for a planned "Ron Trafford Night."

The night, which was expected to establish an educational fund for the Cougar forward who lost an eye as the result of a hockey injury, had been set for next Monday.

The Bruins, after agreeing to play the Cougars in an exhibition on that day, requested a change. Bruins play at home on Sunday and them go to Portland on Tuesday. A Bruins spokesman said a game on Vancouver Island "would be most inconvenient" from a travelling standpoint.

Cougars are going with an alternate plan.

They plan to bring Vancouver's Oldtimers to Victoria for a game on March 27. Memorial Arena has confirmed the new date, but other arrangements haven't been confirmed.

Still to be finalized is an opponent for the Oldtimers' team.

The Cougars, meanwhile, returned home after a Sunday game in Portland to prepare for tonight's Memorial Arena meeting at 8 with Winnipeg Monarchs.

Two Cougars are doubtful starters. Winger Kevin Clackson reinjured a sore shoulder during Victoria's 7-5 victory over Winnipeg on Saturday. In addition, centre Dennis Fenske retired early from Sunday's game, a 3-3 tie, because of a pulled groin muscle.

Meanwhile, Monarch defenceman Kevin McCarthy has broken up Brandon's four-man post-Christmas domination of the individual scoring race.

McCarthy now has 112 points to vault into fourth place in the scoring race past Brandon's Dan Bonar, who has 111.

Brandon's Bill Derlago continues to hold down first place with 163 points. Linemates Ray Allison and Brian Propp have 125 and 124.

Tight Fit Looms in Police Meet

There was a five-way tie at the top when play began this afternoon in the third round of the Canadian police curling championship at the dressed-up Victoria Curling Club and all indications point to a merry scramble for title honors before the event ends Saturday.

Defending-champion Manitoba, skipped by Roy Gislason and with former Canadian champion Neil Dickson, once of Victoria, throwing third rocks, loomed as the early choice Monday with victories over Newfoundland, 8-5, and Quebec, 7-4.

But it is not expected to be an easy road to the championship for any rink. Alberta, skipped by Ken Ursuliak, showed strength with an 8-3 victory over Prince Edward Island and an easy 10-2 triumph over Newfoundland.

Saskatchewan, with the youngest rink in the championship and skipped by 22-year-old Norm Gilbertson, scored a tight 5-1 victory over Nova Scotia in the afternoon Monday and then downed Bob Hawkes' Victoria foursome, representing British Columbia, 9-6, in the evening.

New Brunswick, with Sonny Hirtle calling the shots, and Northern Ontario, led by skip Bill Dustin, were the other double winners.

New Brunswick edged Ontario 8-7 with a last-rock win on the first draw and then Hirtle needed a double on last rock in the evening against the Territories to avoid an extra end and score a 7-5 win.

Dustin of Northern Ontario had to make a final-rock draw against two to get by the Territories 8-7 in the afternoon. His second win was 8-5 over Ontario.

Hawkes was in trouble early against Saskatchewan after winning his first match against Quebec, 13-2.

He gave up a four-ended in the first end and from then on catch-up. He didn't make it, was forced to try and play catch-up .He didn't make it, but he came close.

Trailing 6-1 after four, Hawkes made his bid in the fifth end when, thanks to some fin edraws plus a couple of Saskatchewan misses, he scored four to trail 6-5.

In the sixth end, Hawkes drew behind a covering stone in a bid for the typing point but Gilbertson was equal to the test, followed Hawkes in and tapped him out to take a 7-5 lead.

On the seventh Gilbertson was again called on to make a fine shot and did, doubling two of Hawkes' rocks while hitting against three.

A single on the eighth followed by a steal of one in the ninth by Gilbertson ended Hawkes' hopes.

In Saskatchewan's first game against Nova Scotia it was a hitter's paradise for seven ends. Saskatchewan scored a single in the third, stole a point in the sixth and led 2-1 after seven.

Gilbertson then cracked that game open with a hit and a stick to count three in the eighth.

Prince Edward Island trimmed Nova Scotia 8-2 on the night draw to break even for the day while Quebec, the Territories, Newfoundland, Nova Scotia and Ontario were still looking for their first win when play started today.

Fourth draw will be held tonight at 7 p.m. with the feature match-up being between Alberta and Saskatchewan.

TOKYO (Reuter) — East Germany and Poland cruised to their third victories without a defeat in the Group B world hockey championships Monday, setting the stage for the first meeting between the two nations today.

B.C. in an Upset

WINNIPEG (CP) — Gary Smart of British Columbia became the first giant killer of the Canadian junior men's curling championship Monday night when the North Vancouver foursome upset favored Alberta 5-4.

Skip Paul Gowsell of Calgary, 1976 world junior chanmpion, was heavy with his last rock allowing Smart to steal one of his fourth straight win. The loss was Alberta's first.

Joining B.C. in the undefeated ranks was Bob Sigurdson of Manitoba, who skipped his Winnipeg rink to an easy 9-6 win over Scott Saunders of Nova Scotia.

Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island remained one game behind the leaders by winning their third games.

Manitoba Girls Lead

SAINT JOHN, N. B. (CP)— The Manitoba entry skipped by Patti Vandekerckhove jumped to the top of the standings after four rounds at the Canadian junior womens curling championships Monday but Alberta's Cathy King was right behind.

Both western rinks concluded Monday action as the only teams without a loss with the Vendekerckhove foursome from Stony Mountain on top with a 4-0 mark while King, from Edmonton, was 3-0.

Manitoba defeated Prince Edward Island 12-7 as Alberta had a bye. Nova Scotia defeated Ontario 9-2, Saskatchewan downed The Territories 9-3, Quebec defeated Newfoundland 8-6, and Donna Robertson's B.C. rink defeated New Brunswick 6-2. B.C. was upset 10-7 by Newfoundland in the third round and has a 2-2 mark.

Phony Ticket Looked Too Good

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A Fair Grounds parimutel clerk stymied a counterfeiting operation when he spotted a win ticket that looked too good to be true, a track official said Monday.

The Fair Grounds cashed 129 counterfeit tickets Sunday — $12,384 worth — before clerk Eddie Buchert spotted one. And mutuel manager Carroll Delatt said that another 25 tickets cashed on an exacta — worth $77 each — may also be bogus.

It took place as a crowd of 20,293 packed the thoroughbred track.

Delatte said the pictures on the counterfeit tickets were so good that they looked suspicious.

"Beware when a ticket looks like a Rembrandt," he said. "When they're that good, watch out."

He said Buchert spotted what he thought was a suspicious looking ticket and told the man at the window he needed to get some larger bills. When he turned to a track official for advice, the man ran.

One person was arrested and charged with attempted theft of $384. He was identified as Anthony Bacino, 69.

Security chief Norman Macaluso said Bacino told police he was approached at a bar on the track's third floor.

"The fellow told him he'd give him $50 if he'd cash four tickets. Bacino said he didn't know the person."

Delatt said counterfeiters of the sort that hit the Fair Grounds wait until there is a winner that will give a good payoff — but not so good that it's hard to cash a winning ticket.

They chose the fifth race Sunday, when Don't Deter won and paid $19.20 for a $2 win ticket. The counterfeiters had apparently purchased two $10 win tickets, which they duplicated on an offset printing press.

"The phony tickets started showing up after the seventh race and before the eighth, Delatte said.

He said he did not believe the counterfeiters operated from a van in the track's parking lot.

"We weren't allowing trucks onto the grounds Sunday," he said.

"A group using the same operation hit Hot Springs for $30,000 last month and Hazel Park got hit for $50,000."

AUSSIE KEEPER SHINES

MELBOURNE (Reuter) — Australian wicketkeeper Rodney Marsh added an unbeaten 95 runs to his record-breaking catching Monday to guide Australia to almost impregnable position at the end of the third day of the centenary cricket test against England.

At close of play, Australia was 387 for eight, giving them an over-all lead of 430. Australia scored 138 in its first innings and England 95.

Resuming at 104 for three, the Australian batsmen combined together in partnerships that built up their massive lead.

Marsh's innings was the highlight, but the bravest batting came from Rick McCosker, who had his jaw broken on Saturday during Australia's first innings. McCosker, with his face swollen and heavily bandaged, hit three boundaries in scoring 17 not out.

On Sunday, Marsh set a record number of test dismissals by an Australian wicketkeeper, catching four men to take his career total to 188.

Port Vale Wins

LONDON (Reuter) — Port Vale beat Chester 1-0 in a Third Division game Monday night, the only English League action of the day.

Lafleur Just 'Super'

MONTREAL (CP) — It has not been an easy season for opponents of Montreal Canadiens as the defending National Hockey League champions work toward the best over-all record in the league.

The Canadiens need just one point to clinch the over-all title which will give them home-ice advantage in all of their Stanley Cup playoff games following Monday night's 3-0 triumph over Los Angeles Kings.

Guy Lafleur, Jacques Lemaire and Guy Lapointe scored for the Canadiens with Ken Dryden blocking 25 shots for the shutout.

But it was Lafleur who drew particular praise from the Kings as he brought his league-leading points total to 122 and stretched his consecutive game points scoring streak to 20 games, two short of the NHL record set by Bronco Horvath during the 1959-60 season.

"The team moves with him," said Kings' centre Butch Goring. "He has been playing super. Every team needs a leader and Lafleur seems to be theirs."

The Kings, in the thick of a second-place battle with Pittsburgh Penguins in the Norris division, played better hockey Monday than in their last appearance here Jan. 15, a game they lost 6-0.

"They played well," said Canadiens' defenceman Larry Robinson, who assisted on Lafleur's third-period goal to run his points total to 76, a club record for defenceman.

Robinson felt the Canadiens played one of the better games in recent days, noting that "all the guys played well, everybody was good on every shift."

"Kenny (Dryden) also made some big saves for us when we needed them."

The man most affected by Dryden's efforts was Goring, who was stopped on a second-period breakaway and also was foiled twice early in the third period.

"I didn't know what I was going to do on the breakaway," said Goring. "I was looking at him from the blueline in and I was hoping that he was going to make the first move. He didn't.

"It was just one of those nights when the goalie just has your number."

Cancer Preventable, U.K. Expert Feels

LONDON (UPI) — One of Britain's most distinguished scientists believes "the evidence that cancer can be prevented has accumulated steadily and is now overwhelming."

"Whether it will ever be possible to prevent the disease altogether, as we can now prevent poliomyelitis and scurvy, it is impossible to say until we know more about the mechanism by which it is produced," said Sir Richard Doll, professor of medicine at the University of Oxford.

"But we should be able to reduce the age-specific incidence rates — which account for a quarter of all deaths of men in Britain under 75 years of age — by at least 80 to 90 per cent. That this is so, is suggested primarily by the great variation in the incidence of different types of cancer in different communities and in different parts of the world."

Doll, one of the first to call attention to the probable links between smoking and cancer, recalled in an article published in the British Medical Journal that it was once commonly assumed that cancers were an inevitable accompaniment of aging and little could be done to reduce the mortality they caused.

It is now clear, however, said the article, that most, if not all, cancers have environmental causes and can in principle be prevented. The identification of environmental hazards and clarification of the mechanisms through which they cause disease are thus among the highest priorities in cancer research.

Doll said that only Denmark and the state of Connecticut had carefully reigstered cancer cases over the past 10 years so it was difficult to chart the advance or recession of different cancers in different parts of the world. But some changes were dramatic enough to be obvious.

"For example," he said, "the increase in lung cancer in all developed countries, the increase in esophageal cancer in the black population of South Africa, and the decrease in gastric cancer in the U.S. Taken altogether, the evidence suggests that all common cancers have varied in incidence from time to time, just as they now vary from place to place.

"Much of this variation can now be attributed to the action of specific agents. Indeed, so many are now known that we may reasonably hope to extrapolate from past experience in seeking others."

Pointing out the roads of present and future research, Doll said dietary factors were now competing for the interest of research workers on almost equal terms with viruses and immune reactions.

"I see no reason why causes for the remaining common cancers should not be detected within one or two decades," Doll said. "That is not to say that it will be easy to prevent the disease.

"For if, as I suspect, these hazards are associated with the common diet of developed countries, the problems that we are now having to face in preventing tobacco-induced cancer will seem childishly simply."

And the researchers will need a little luck as well.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

An Esquimalt man who told Esquimalt police Saturday moring that his car was stolen but later admitted he was involved in an accident was fined a total of $250 Monday in Victoria provincial court.

William Allan Bigcanoe, of 848 Old Esquimalt Road, pleaded guilty to mischief by making a false statement to police and to obtaining food from Paul's Restaurant, 1900 Douglas, by fraud.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan told Judge William Ostler that Bigcanoe reported his car stolen at about 4:40 a.m., half an hour after it was involved in an accident. Police later ascertained that Bigcanoe was the driver at the time of the mishap.

Mulligan also said Bigcanoe left Paul's without paying a $2.05 bill earlier that morning.

Ostler levied a $250 fine on the mischief charge and a $50 fine on the other.

Edwin Turone, 21, of 1252 Denman, received a one-month sentence for stealing two coats Saturday and a concurrent, seven-day term for fraudulently obtaining lodgings from the Douglas Hotel.

Court was told Turone two coats from the Empress Hotel and was wearing one when arrested as he was hitchhiking.

Turone also admitted staying three nights at the Douglas Hotel and skipping out on a $56.70 bill.

Court was also told Turone was facing another charge at the time of his arrest.

A 28-year-old man whose attack on his wife was described as a "vicious assault" by Ostler, was handed a suspended sentence and placed on a year's probation.

Gordon Ernest Dixon, formerly of 3308 Tennyson, pleaded guilty to assault causing bodily harm Jan. 26 and was remanded for a pre-sentence report.

The offence took place Jan. 22 and resulted in Dixon's wife receiving a broken nose and other head injuries.

Dixon, who told the court he was trying to cure an alcohol problem, is also facing two charges involving weapons in connection with his wife and a preliminary hearing has been scheduled for next month.

"I hope you're ashamed," commented Ostler, who acknowledged that the drinking problem had caused a temporary separation between Dixon and his wife and family.

★ ★ ★

A 24-year-old man who pleaded guilty to assaulting a 66-year-old man Feb. 10 was fined $250.

David Irwin, of 203 Montreal, pleaded guilty to assault causing bodily harm.

Court was told the elderly man, who was driving in the Princess Mary parking lot looking for a space, was struck in the face by Irwin.

Irwin told the judge the victim cut him off on the Johnson Street bridge earlier, forcing him to stop suddenly and stalling his car.

Ostler called Irwin's conduct "arrogant, cowardly and contemptible."

★ ★ ★

Roger Lindal, 38, of 5191 Rambler elected trial by judge alone on charges of breaking and entering, possession of stolen property and attempted theft of a boat March 5.

Lindal is charged in connection with the break-in of a Sidney Island cabin belonging to Jack Todd of Victoria, possession of property taken from that break-in and attempting to steal a boat from Robert Smale.

Douglas Christie, counsel for Lindal, did not apply for bail Monday and had a preliminary hearing date set for April 21 on all charges.

★ ★ ★

Richard Michael Wayne Weller, 17, pleaded guilty to forging 13 cheques and cashing them between Feb. 1 and 6 and was remanded until Thursday for a pre-sentence report and sentence.

Mulligan said the forged cheques were drawn on the joint account belonging to Weller's step-father and grandmother and involved more than $1,000.

Ostler remanded Weller in custody after learning that the youth was no longer welcome at 546 Normandy, the home of his mother and step-father.

★ ★ ★

Fined $400 for having a blood-alcohol content over .08 was Lawrence Joseph Dinn, 29, of HMCS Saskatchewan. Court was told the offence took place Feb. 26 in Vancouver where he was stopped after police noticed he was driving erratically on Oak Street. A breath demand was made and a subsequent reading of .14 obtained, court was told.

Judge Dismisses Latta Civil Suit

CALGARY (CP) — A civil suit launched by former Queen's University law professor Keith Latta, who now is serving a life imprisonment sentence for murder, was dismissed Monday in Alberta Supreme Court by Mr. Justice W. KI.Moore.

Latta, an inmate at William Head, was convicted in 1971 of the murder of Robert Neville, an Edmonton travel agent and a former business associate of Latta's.

The civil suit against London Life Insurance Co. developed as an offshoot of the murder case.

In it, Latta sued for $75,000 proceeds of an insurance policy he held on Neville.

In a civil trial here in December, Latta maintained he was innocent of the murder and therefore should be able to collect the insurance.

He advanced the theory that Neville was murdered by an unknown person who had been threatening his life, and said he witnessed the actual shooting the morning of June 13, 1971.

But in a 59-page judgment, Mr. Justice Moore said he did not believe Latta's evidence.

"I am satisfied on the whole of the evidence that he murdered Neville."

As such, London Life is not obliged to pay any amount under the policy to Latta as such payment would be contrary to public policy.

Latta contended that new evidence came to light since his original conviction that supported his theory that someone else killed Neville.

However, some of that evidence was ruled inadmissible by a special panel of appeal judges last summer.

Justice Moore ruled that evidence as hearsay and refused to admit it in the civil trial.

Other evidence that was hearsay but was admitted on special grounds by Mr. Justice Moore was ruled by him to have no probative value.

This related to testimony from both Edmonton school teacher Gerald Pomeroy and airline manager Boris Onisko.

Pomeroy testified Neville had spoken to him of threats and Onisko recalled Neville being edgy and concerned "someone was out to get him."

Province Price Up

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Vancouver Province announced Monday that owing to sharply-increased distribution costs, the street-sale and subscription rates for subscribers in the B.C. interior and on Vancouver Island will be increased, effective Wednesday.

The monthly rate for home delivered copies of the morning newspaper will increase 50 cents to $4.50. Single copy price on weekdays will be 25 cents, up from 20 cents, and 30 cents, up from 25 cents, for the Saturday weekend edition, except in areas where newspapers are delivered by air freight.

The newspaper said the new prices were due to higher costs for trucks, fuel and repairs.

This is the first increase for these circulation areas since 1974.

Nanaimo Balky At Steel Mill, Mayor Admits

Nanaimo Mayor Frank Ney said today a steel mill and an industrial park could be a shot in the arm for the area's economy — but there are continuing objections from politicians and environmentalists.

Ney was commenting on a statement by Economic Development Minister Don Phillips that the province might carry out a feasibility study on a Vancouver Island steel mill, if there is any community support for the project.

Phillips made the offer of a study in a speech to Associated Chamber of Commerce of Vancouver Island in Duncan Monday night but stressed the study would centre only on sites where the community would welcome a steel mill.

(In 1974 Harmac, south of Nanaimo, and Dunsmuir, an E and N rail stop north of the city, were two of seven sites mentioned in connection with a proposed steel mill. However, in 1976, the Japanese Nippon Kokan Steel Co., which would have provided some of the funding, pulled out of the project.)

Ney conceded it would be difficult to sell the idea of a steel mill to Nanaimo citizens "because they associate it with coal and soot."

However, all that Phillips is proposing is a study and Nanaimo citizens should be open-minded enough to welcome that, Ney said.

Phillips, speaking Monday night to a meeting of the Associated Chambers of Vancouver Island in Duncan, stressed he will not force a steel mill on anyone.

"Economic development in B.C. will got to those areas of the province that welcome it," he said.

"I am prepared to recommend that phase two studies be reinstituted to determine the social and environmental impact such an industry would have on the island."

Studies on the Nanaimo site never got past the initial stages. It is those studies that Phillips told the meeting he was prepared to reinstitute.

"Vancouver Island has supplies of coal. Vancouver Island has the labor force. Vancouver Island has natural amenities. My question is this: Does Vancouver Island want a steel mill?" the minister asked.

Phillips challenged the Chamber of Commerce and the residents of Vancouver Island to tell him now their objections to the mill.

"There is no reason to do any study if the people whose lives it would affect have prejudged the outcome," he said.

"The answer is really up to you."

Phillips told the meeting of his tour last year of the steel mill development on a reclaimed island in Tokyo Bay.

"The old image of a steel works, an unattractive brownish area, has completely changed. Trees, shrubs and grass are predominant everywhere," the minister said.

"Trees grow beside coking ovens. A far cry from the image we have of the ovens we know now in the Kootenays."

Matzah Ban Protest

VANCOUVER (CP) — Jewish community leaders demonstrated Monday outside the H. R. MacMillan Planetarium to protest the Soviet Unions recent ban on the mailing of matzahs to Soviet Jews in time for passover.

Led by Rabbi Abe Cooper and MP John Fraser (PC — Vancouver South) about 15 demonstrators attempted to get three Russian technicians at the current Kosmos '77 space exhibit to take back three packages of matzoh, passover foods and mail them to three Russian Jews.

The technicians would not accept the packages despite pleas by both Cooper and Fraser. Finally, David Hurd, project co-ordinator of the Russian exhibit took them and said he would try to have them mailed.

M-M-M-M! Now that's really finger-lickin' good, says the expression in Christine McCaig's eyes as she samples the ware of the sugar bush. She was part of a Grade 1 class from Sarnia, Ont., who toured a neighboring maple syrup producing estate to see how it comes from tree to table.

DANSON 'DECEIVING'

OTTAWA (CP) — Defence Minister Barney Danson has come under criticism for saying that the Soviet nuclear missile submarine fleet, whose weapons are aimed at North America, is vulnerable to attack from Western anti-submarine forces.

"He doesn't know what he is talking about," Allan McKinnon of Victoria, Progressive Conservative defence critic, said in an interview, adding that the minister is deceiving the people.

Dr. J. G. Jacobsen of Acadia University, an acknowledged expert on strategic and anti-submarine warfare, said in a telephone interview from Wolfville, N.S., the nuclear fleet is essentially invulnerable now and will be completely invulnerable in the future.

The debate is over the undersea missile forces maintained by both the United States and the Soviet Union, generally referred to as each country's second-strike capability.

That term means that the nuclear missile can be fired from under the sea after land-based intercontinental ballistic missiles ICBM have been fired or destroyed.

Because these submarines are hard to find and harder to destroy, many experts say the second-strike capability is invulnerable. And because they are invulnerable they provide a deterrent because an enemy will know it faces nuclear destruction even if land-based ICBMs are destroyed.

Danson said in a television interview last week that Canadian and Western anti-submarine forces can reach these submarines.

"I don't think anything is invulnerable," he said. He added both in that interview and in answer to Commons questions Monday that the defences are not perfect but the capability to seek out and destroy is there.

Collision 'Soviet Fault'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The collision of a Soviet missile submarine and a U.S. frigate in the Ionian Sea last August was blamed Monday by the United States Navy on the Russian ship.

The collision caused a minor injury to an American sailor and more than $500,000 damage to the frigate Voge. The navy said the Voge's skipper, Cmdr. Ralph Ortengren of Dayton, Ohio, and crew acted properly during the incident.

"It was concluded that the manoeuvring of the Soviet submarine was the cause of the collision," the navy said in summing up a month-long investigation.

The Russian government has not expressed a willingness to pay for the damages to the Voge, the navy said.

"We have discussed the incident with the Soviet authorities," the navy said. "We want to avoid incidents like this in the future, and we believe that improved contacts with Soviets in diplomatic and military channels can contribute to this."

Cancer Seen Early

TORONTO (CP) — Cancer gives warning signals years before victims develop the disease, Dr. Emmanuel Farber of the University of Toronto said Monday.

During a meeting of the American Association of Pathologists, he said that science must put emphasis on research to detect these subtle changes.

"We know we are dealing with disease that takes years — 25 years — to evolve," he said. "And even early diagnosis of cancer is too late as far as I am concerned."

He said that by the time cancer is detected, treatment for it must be so powerful the patient often suffers severe side effects.

"But even long before precancer, cells look different. They look different biochemically."

Women Denied Justice?

VANCOUVER (CP)—Lawyers are conspiring to deny justice to women and dragging out legal processes in order to collect more money from impoverished women clients, a public meeting of the New Democratic Party caucus was told.

In calling for an investigation into discrimination against women by the legal profession, the leader of four women who spoke to the caucus and the audience of about 100 people said they are demanding and asking for justice.

"There is too much malpractice going on," she said. "We are claiming that the lawyers are gaining by stringing out complaints for years."

The 47-year-old leader of the four gave her name in an interview but she asked that she be identifed only as "Bliss."

She took over when a 60-year-old woman started sobbing uncontrollably when she described the legal complications raising from the end of her 32-year marriage.

Bliss said thje woman cannot afford the $70 an hour charged by lawyers while her husband can easily afford to pay lawyers to set court dates which he then does not attend.

Bliss said she has been involved in 10 years of litigation and, although she got a divorce in 1968, she is still fighting.

Non-professional people should be appointed to the law society to keep the lawyers honest, she said.

Bliss sais she has been trying to find out the status of 417 complaints against lawyers which wer handed over to the law society.

The law society investigates such complaints but it acts to protect its own members, she said.

Former attorney-general Alex Macdonald told the women that the previous NDP government wanted to appoint some non-professionals as benchers at the law society but was voted out of office before the plan could become reality.

He said the community law system now is under attack, both by the present government and "the reactionary part of the legal profession," which does not like needy people to get free advice.

The NDP government appointed two laypeople to the legal services commission but one has since been replaced by a well-qualified lawyer, Macdonald said.

Gabriella Scafidi, 36, said in an interview she and her two daughters are living on $578 a month welfare while her husband earns $4,000 a month and pays nothing for their upkeep.

She says all the lawyers are friends and "they seem to agree to keep on postponing things."

Rachel Baker, 47, told in an interview of her struggle to support her 14-year-old son from the proceeds of a small roominghouse, while a 12-year court battle depleted her energy and her finances.

She accused the lawyers of conspiring to string out the case unmercifully.

Rosemary Brown (NDP—Vancouver-Burrard) urged the women to join other women who have organized to fight for their rights.

The four women explained that they met accidentally, discovered their common grievances against lawyers, and decided to fight together.

The caucus heard from a number of labor organizations, including the B.C. Federation of Labor, the Vancouver and District Labor Council, the Canadian Union of Public Employees and the Greater Vancouver Regional and Municipal Employees Union.

Labor representatives complained about the failure of rent control, the effect of the federal Anti-Inflation Board on wages and right-to-work legislation.

Horse-Shooting Threat Backs Track Demand

SURREY (CP) — Alderman Bill Millar says Mayor Ed McKitka claims quarterhorse breeders might start shooting horses if he (Millar) does not reverse his stand on a controversial racetrack here.

Millar said he also has received threats through McKitka that the parking lot of his business would be filled with horses unless he no longer opposes the Meadow Creek Farms track in the Hazelmere Valley.

Millar said he will introduce a motion to the March 21 council meeting asking it to reverse its earlier rejection of the track on certain conditions. He said his decision had nothing to do with the threats, but was made after talks with horse owners.

"There was consideration that there would be horses shot," he said.

"It's their horses. They can do what they want with them."

Millar said McKitka phoned him and said quarterhorse owners would put 200 horses and trailers in the parking lot of his grocery store.

Millar said he would welcome the people with their horses because it would make the place look busy.

Council rejected the track in a tie vote Feb. 7 after the B.C. land commission reversed two rejections of Meadow Creek. In the controversy following the decision, a probe was launched into council's decision last May to approve the track after Meadow Creek president Capt. Harry Terry met with council.

Millar said he has had some problems with McKitka, who hhad told him there were 6,000 people against him.

He said no quarterhorse people had made threats to him personally.

Millar said he opposed Meadow Creek because Terry had bullied council and ignored municipal bylaws in the past. The track, which is partially built, has been used for racing under a temporary permit.

Terry said he had donw nothing to force a change of mind of the track's future. He said if council changes its mind, racing could resume this summer.

Approval of the land commission, Surrey council and the Greater Vancouver Regional District is necessary before the track can go ahead.

TEACHER BEEFS STUDY SET

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Teachers Federation announced Monday that it will set up a commission to look into teacher complaints about kindergartens.

Federation president Bill Broadley told a news conference that a commission made home-and-school representup of two teachers and a ative will look into the situation.

Teachers have complained about kindergarten class size, space, supplies and teacher tenure.

Later Monday, the Vancouver school board issued a news release saying the commission is an inappropriate body to deal with complaints because the board and the teachers have a labor contract that includes grievance procedures.

Sawmill Growth Exhausted In Interior—Waterland

VANCOUVER (CP) — Forests Minister Tom Waterland said Monday that growth in the sawmilling industry in the B.C. central interior has reached the limits of the resource.

"Future expansion of the industry must be either to the north into pioneer country or into a modernization and expansion of the products base on which the southern interior and coastal sawmilling pulp and paper industries are based," Waterland told the annual meeting of the Canadian Forestry Association of B.C.

New Evidence

DAWSON CREEK (CP) — The murder trial of a Fort St. John man charged in the death of an 18-month-old girl was adjourned indefinitely Monday in B.C. Supreme Court when Crown counsel stated that new evidence had come to light.

Gary Finlay, 34, is charged with murder in the March 9, 1976, death of Robin Kerr in Fort St. John.

A cononer's inquest in May concluded that the child died as the result of a beating.

Decision Delayed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mr. Justice K. E. Meredith reserved decision Monday on a bid to free a man from Riverview mental hospital in Coquitlam, after he was advised that the provincial cabinet has still not acted on the matter.

Two weeks ago, the judge adjourned the hearing pending a cabinet decision on the case of Ronald Eugene Ingram, held in Riverview since 1965 after being found not guilty by reason of insanity in the Nanaimo Lover's Lane murders.

Ingram, 48, shot two young people in 1962.

Airborne at Last

VANCOUVER (CP) — The 60 members of 135 Squadron of the Royal Canadian Air Cadet League finally have an airplane of their own — two years behind schedule.

A bright yellow 1946 Piper Cub was presented to the squadron Sunday at Vancouver International Airport by the ladies auxiliary of Branch 177 of the Royal Canadian Legion.

The ceremony would have occurred two years ago except for a windstorm which tossed the plane several hundred yards across an airfield, causing extensive damage.

Escaper Sentenced

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Earl Douglas Sandbach has been sentenced to 30 days in Prince George Regional Correctional Centre after admitting he unlawfully left a work party there March 9. He is serving time for a driving offence and assaulting a peace officer.

Mill Needs Land

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Carl Frantz, managing director of Northwood Pulp and Timber, says his company cannot sell prime industrial land in Houston, B.C., because it would need it in the event of expansion. Frantz said that Northwood plans to be in Houston a long time.

3,500 Opposed

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — A petition sponsored by the Consumer Association of Canada demanding that B.C. Hydro rates be kept within anti-inflation guidelines has been signed by 3,500 people here. Hydro increased residential gas and electricity rates by more than 12 per cent March 1.

Inquest Slated

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — An inquest will be held into the deaths of John Steven and Jerome Sam, both 20, in a collision Saturday between the car in which they were riding and a semi-trailer near Uclulet. Both men were from Tofino.

100,000 in Contest

VANCOUVER (CP) — An estimated 100,000 entries have been submitted to the Victoria advertising agency handling the Ministry of Municipal Affairs' contest to name the new Burrard Inlet ferry service. The winner, expected to be announced April 5, will become an honorary captain of the ferry service, receive a lifetime pass for the system and take part in inaugural ceremonies in mid-June.

357 Eggs Consumed

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Six persons gobbled 357 eggs in one hour to raise $15,902.90 for the March of Dimes. Top eater was Phil Blanchard, who ingested 86 eggs, some raw, some scrambled, to raise $430.

Eight-Year Term

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ernest Stephen Mountain was sentenced to eight years Monday after he was found guilty of attempting to murder Terri Ann Harder last Sept. 3 by choking her with a length of chain. Mountain had pleaded not guilty.

HOLD SHIPPING PROBE, COAST AREAS DEMAND

VANCOUVER (CP)—Four region districts on the B.C. coast sent a telegram to Transport Minister Otto Lang Mondap, asking that he hold a promised inquiry into coastal shipping.

During a visit to Prince Rupert in December, the federal minister said he would commission a study of passenger and freight service to B.C. coastal communities.

Ferry service to 16 coastal communities was affected last November when the federal government cancelled its subsidy to Northland Navigation which had privided freight and passenger service.

Since then, Rivtow Straits has provided a freight service.

Ray Parfitt, regional planner for the Kitimat-Stikine district, said Monday that the districts will not accept the inferior service.

CRUISE AID 'BRIBE'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Jack Cressey, vice-president of Kitimat Pipeline Ltd., says he is surprised environmentalists aren't applauding the company's offer to give $25,000 to a convention cruise by representatives of the province's northern municipalities.

Opponents of the company's proposed Kitimat-to-Edmonton oil pipeline sai dMonday the donation to the 1977 North Central Municipal Association annual convention amounts to a "bribe."

But Cressy said the gift can't be considered a bribe because the people on the cruise "are not the ones who are going to make a decision on any of this."

Cressey said the company agreed to support the convention — to be held aboard the cruise ship Princess Patricia — provided the ship travelled the route oil tankers would take to the proposed pipeline terminal.

"We said we'd provide whatever funds they were short," said Cressey.

Kitimat Mayor George Thom, whose city is playing host to the convention, said organizers "thought the company might like to sponsor one of the diners aboard ship."

When organizers told the company the tanker route would involve $25,000 worth of extra running time, the company promised to pay extra costs, he said.

"We considered the $25,000 offer a plum" Thom said.

The cruise ship costs $22,000 a day to charter.

Hank Lavertu, a spokesman for Save Our Shores, a Prince Rupert group opposed to the pipeline, said the offer constitutes a bribe.

"If a corporation is underwriting a convention of elected officials when no political sanctions have been given to the pipeline proposal, then it constitutes a bribe," Lavertu said.

Cressey said the donation was not an attempt to influence the representatives of the 35 municipalities invited on the cruise. He said the company will not be holding any discussions or seminars about its proposal during the cruise.

Oak Bay Likes Golf Club Site For Pumphouse

Oak Bay council, responding to an 800-signature petition, voted Monday night to ask the Capital Regional District to consider among various sites for a sewage pumphouse the fifth tee of Victoria Golf Club.

The regional district, which turned down an Oak Bay suggestion of an outfall at Trial Island, is planning to divert Oak Bay's sewage via a land connection to the new Clover Point outfall, now under construction.

This necessitates a pumphouse in south Oak Bay to push the municipality's sewage over Gonzales Hill to the city side. The first suggested site, on the seaside of the 500-block Beach, met with strong opposition from residents who formed the Shoal Bay Ratepayers Association.

Sixty residents came to the council meeting to press their point that the fifth tee golf course site is the best available without disturbance to golfers or homeowners alike.

The Shoal Bay Ratepayers Association said that, of five sites studied, this one has the fewest homes nearby and is the greatest distance from homes of all sites investigated. Any access road on the golf course would be short and cross only one fairway.

The Victoria Golf Club, meanwhile, said if a site on its property is decided on, and there are alternative feasible sites on the property, it wants to make submissions.

Mayor Brian Smith told residents that Monday night's council meeting wasn't going to consider a site for the pumping station.

He expected the municipal sewage advisory committee will meet late next week to do this, as soon as regional district data on alternative sites is available.

He said the committee has to decide the least repugnant of the sites, and it would have to consider costs as well as the actual site. The committee's recommendation would come to council for adoption before being sent to the regional board as Oak Bay's recommendation.

Smith criticized the regional board for turning down the Trial Island site without hearing from Oak Bay's consulting engineer and for letting contracts on the Clover Point project as if Oak Bay didn't exist.

In other business, a move to keep dogs off Shoal Bay and Gonzales Bay beaches in the summer was defeated three votes to two. The proposal had been criticized by Ald. John Goult and others as an unnecessary regulatory intrusion into people's lives.

Council approved paying its 13.57 per cent share, or $30,830, with other municipalities for renovations to the Royal Theatre.

OTTAWA WINS ANOTHER WAR OF LETTERS

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Staff

What takes three years and ends up being a fruitless "Mad Magazine" chase through the Ottawa bureaucracy?

Oak Bay's claim for $463.91 to clean up a minor marine oil spill in January, 1974.

The municipality sent its claim to local and regional officials of the transport ministry and to three cabinet ministers. No luck.

Then administrator W. S. Fleming tried L. C. Audette, administrator of the Maritime Pollution Claims Fund.

Audette replied that several conditions had to be met, one of which was to establish that the oil found in the sea was discharged from a ship.

This prompted Ald. John Goult to wonder where else an oil spill could come from, if not from a ship or barge.

Audette also pointed out that proceedings to recover costs must be initiated within two yeats.

In short, Audette said he couldn't authorize payment because "I find nothing to lead me to believe that it is clear that the oil was discharged from a ship, that the ship was carrying more than 1,000 tons of oil, that the remedial action taken by your corporation was authorized by the Governor-in-Council (federal cabinet), that you have proceeded against the shipowner or, if the ship is not capable of identification, against me withim the prescriptive period of two years."

He said: "Your claim appears to be one that has wended its way through every possible wrong avenue, without any real consideration given to the existing legislation, and one which no one ever sought to bring to my attention as the only person really concerned or responsible until it was far too late."

(In the course of the three years, Oak Bay wrote to three separate ministers of the environment — Jack Davis, Jeanne Sauve and Romeo LeBlanc).

But, said Audette in his letter to Oak Bay:

"My role as administrator being quasi-judicial, no minister or department of government can properly give me directives in dealing with claims. However, on my own, I would have been glad to give you help at the outset had I been aware of the circumstances and had I been able to do so. Now it is not only too late but I suspect that there was never a valid claim which the law would have allowed me to pay."

Mayor

Mayor Brian Smith suggested all the correspondence would be appropriate for Mad Magazine.

After a comment from one alderman that at least Oak Bay now has learned to whom to write if there is a future oil spill, the letters were received and filed.

Crash on Ice Kills Woman

A head-on collision on icy roads two miles north of Qualicum Beach Saturday morning claimed the life of Louise Irving, 51, of Qualicum Beach.

Her car was in collision with a vehicle driven by John James Marshall, 51, of 1320 Franklin Terrace, Victoria. Marshall was not seriously injured.

Tree Savers Try Again

A Saanich project to encourage builders and developers to save trees has failed.

Municipal assistant parks administrator Gerry Chaster and planner David Harper admit their booklet, Vegetation and Development didn't have much effect. They prepared it at the request of the lands, planning and housing committee.

The committee is now studying other ways to preserve trees.

"We're looking at different options," Harper said. "It could be done through land-use contracts. There's the possibility of restrictive covenants for subdivisions, a public education approach or a permit system under bylaw."

Tenders This Week on Music Wing

Tenders will be called by the end of this week for the long-awaited $3.2 million music wing at the University of Victoria, vic-president George Pedersen said Monday.

Provincial government approval was given Friday for the project which has been on the books since early December when the Universities Council of B.C. reversed an earlier decision and recommended to Education Minister Pat McGeer the music wing be given the go-ahead after all.

As well as the music wing addition to the MacLaurin building, McGeer announced the government will pay for Clearihue building's third wing which was completed last year at a cost of $885,00.

The two projects, however, are only the first on a list of priorities involving $42 million in captial expenditures over the next five years.

If the university doesn't receive permission to proceed with the other projects, there will be a serious crowding problem, Pedersen said. Today 10 per cent of the university's space is provided by Second World War army huts.

A number of projects and programs are in various stages of development, but have gone as far as possible without buildings, he said.

In order of priority (in grouped pairs they are:

—fourth wing of Clearihue so all humanities programs can be in one building, and the academic theatre building which is in an army hut.

PEDERSEN
. . . much more needed

—the visual arts building and law building including a law library. Law is on the second floor of the main library.

—a building for the schools of social work and nursing, and a science building to house the bacteriology, biochemistry and any new science programs as the department expands. The science department is in army huts.

—a building for offices and more classrooms, and finally alterations and renovations to existing buildings.

Each project has to go through various levels of approval including the universities council and several departments in the ministry of education.

The new academic programs are outgrowing their temporary quarters and the army huts are at a point where it is no longer economically logical to keep repairing them, Pedersen said.

And most of the huts don't conform with Saanich municipality's building regulations, he said.

TASTELESS TV ADS NOT FOR MIXED COMPANY

DEAR ABBY: I see that you've launched a campaign to get rid of "offensive" TV commercials. You told your readers to write to the heads of the networks, and to boycott the products whose TV commercials offend you. You insist that if enough people protest in this manner, offensive commercials will be driven off the air.

According to you, ads for Kotex, Tampons and douches, plus aids for hemorrhoids and diarrhea are "offensive."

Why pick on TV? Why not extend your crusade to cleaning up newspaper ads too? Is it because newspapers publish "Dear Abby and provide your bread and butter, and TV does not?

Just where do you draw the line, Abby? — CURIOUS IN CHICAGO.

DEAR CURIOUS: I draw the line when while entertaining my rabbi, my father-in-law and my teenage nephew, the TV is turned on and suddenly we are informed that a new disposable douche now comes premeasured and in two lovely fragrances!

Had I read this ad in a newspaper it would not have been offensive. But to hear it in the presence of the aforementioned company is an embarrassment that I certainly would have avoided—given a choice.

DEAR ABBY: Is there some gracious way I can encourage my daughter-in-law to invite us for dinner?

My son has been married for three and a half years and we have never been invited to their house for dinner. She has been to my home for all holidays ,and drops in right at dinnertime several times a month. So obviously she is willing to eat with me—but just at my house.

My feelings have really been hurt when I hear that they have entertained their friends, my other son and his family, and my daughter and her friend for dinner.

Should I say something to my son? I am really surprised at him because we've always been a very close family.

They both read your column, so maybe they will read this and get the idea. Please don't mention my name or town. Oh, her folks have never been invited, either. Thank you.—HURT.

DEAR HURT: There is no gracious way to invite yourself to anyone's home for dinner. No, I wouldn't mention it to my son if I were you. He knows. And I'd rather stay home than ask to be invited.

By LYNN AND JOEL RAPP

DEAR READERS: We've received so many letters requesting specific information on individual plants that we are going through the plants, one at a time, sharing all pertinent information. You will want to clip these columns, as we'll be introducing you to new potential plant friends, as well as reintroducing you to some old favorites.

POTHOS: Pothos is an outstanding plant with which to begin your growing wxperience. It makes an excellent gift because it is easy to grow, quite beautiful and doesn't require the greenest of thumbs.

Pothos are extremely bejsatile when decorating with plants. They can hang in a colorful macrame holder, be trained up a sphagnum-moss totem pole or sit gracefully on a table of shelf. They can also be easily trained up, down and across walls.

Pothos are extremely versa- If too much light is provided, the leaves fade and curl inward and sometimes even melt. The more yellow or white (variegation) in the leaves, the more light they need. This is true of all houseplants. The greener the leaves, the less light they require. They need water only when "dryish."

Pothos belongs to the Scindapsus family and is a first cousin to the philodendron. As you will see, there is a strong family resemblance. Pothos are totally hassle-free, but that doesn't mean they need less T.L.C. than other members of your plant family. They are easily propagated by stem cuttings. Pothos can also be grown in water for years.

Try a foliar feeding once a month. You'll really be amazed at how large the leaves will grow! They can be fed monthly during their growth period, but always half-strength.

India abounds in tourist treasures. The best time to visit this populous country is between October and March.

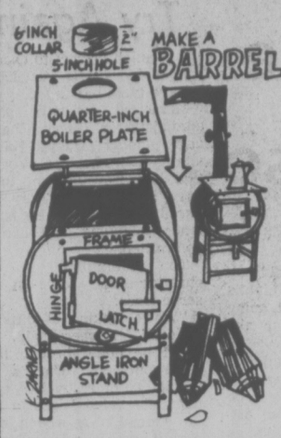
If you would like to learn something about India's history and development, read the 28-page illustrated brochure "This Is India." It offers a brief outline of the land and its people and tells you about the country's main religions: Hinduism, Buddhism and Jainism. You will also learn about India's artistic heritage, as well as its music and folk dances. Furthermore, the brochure mentions some of the places which would be of special interest to visitors and what these have to offer. Suggestions for one and two weeks' sightseeing itineraries are also included.

The 40-page "India—Tourist Information" tells you about the country's climate, customs, health and currency regulations, accommodations, transportation, entertainment and just about everything else a potential tourist would want to know.

Although most people enjoy Indian food, the booklet points out that in all leading city restautants and botels western style meals are also available.

Send your request to: Government of India Tourist Office, Suite 1016, Royal Trust Tower, Toronto, Ontario. M5K 1K7. Please allow at least 2-3 weeks for delivery.

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS
...it tells you how



If the supply of heating oil and natural gas runs as short during the coming winter as the experts predict ... this could be a good time to recycle an old metal 55-gallon barrel into a shop, garage or other outbuilding stove.

Just cut six inches from the drum's diameter and bolt one-inch angle iron (placed inside the barrel) across the ends of the cut. Then bolt a slab of quarter-inch boiler plate to the angles. Cut a five-inch-diameter hole in the rear of the plate and weld two inches of six-inch pipe (for a stovepipe collar) to the slab of metal.

An 8-1/2" X 11-1/2" chunk of half-inch plate steel is all you'll need for your heater's door. Hinge it with one-inch-long sections of 5/8" tubing slipped over pieces of 1/2" steel rod fastened to a 10" X 13-1/2" piece of quarter-inch boiler plate. Cut an 8" X 10" opening in the center of this door "frame" and bolt the framing over an 8" X 10" hole cut into the end of the drum. A very serviceable latch can be fabricated from five inches of quarter-inch strap iron which hooks behind an inch-long section of 1-1/2" angle welded to the doorframe.

Weld the barrel to an angle iron stand, hook up the stovepipe and you're in business. Control the heater's draft by screwing pipe bushings into the opening (already in the drum when you started) beneath the door of the stove.

All the materials for this project (except, maybe, the bolts and stovepipe) can be found in any dump or junkyard. And the wood you'll use for fuel? Deadfall limbs, busted-up shipping pallets and other discards of our affluent society should provide all the material you'll need ... free for the gathering.

Eroding Family Life

By LESTER COLEMAN, M.D.

A 17-year-old boy came to my office with his parents. Both parents were bright, accomplished people, but they seemed to show a total lack of respect for any thought that the boy spontaneously the boy spontaneously expressed. They seemed almost apologetic for everything he said.

I had seen this boy before. When he was alone with me I was impressed with his intelligence and his maturity. In the presence of his parents he seemed to be struggling desperately to hold on to his own individuality and dignity.

I gave much thought to the weaving patterns of hostility that seemed to envelop these three people: patterns that were slowly eroding a family relationship.

I knew these parents well enough to call them later and point out the supercharged emotions between them and their adolescent son. They readily admitted that their attitude in my office was based on their embarrassment about his appearance. His faded blue jeans, his long hair and his worn tennis sneakers distressed the parents.

Too often, parents overlook the fact that adolescence is a period of psychological conflicts, frustrations and confusion. The adolescent often attains physical maturity long before he develops emotional stability. When lost in a maze of his own conflicts, he may lash out with his only protective device, his rebelliousness. His unwillingness to conform to conventional dress is one form of this rebelliousness, and his need to express himself as an individual.

Adolescence can be just as difficult a period for the parents as it is for the child. Mutual understanding and civility is a responsibility that both have to each other. Both can then develop the art of listening to each other and, with mutual respect, learn the skill of communication.

The transition from adolescence to young adulthood and maturity is a fragile period. Young men and women need direction in solidifying relationships with their peers and with adults.

A new magazine, Real World, published by King Features Syndicate in New York City and distributed through schools, is devoted to the physical, emotional, social, economic and scholastic activities of the post-adolescent period — the "real world" after high school or college. It is their magazine. It opens wide horizons of understanding about higher education, jobs, social relationships, family situations, sexuality and occupational planning. "Real World" is a valuable concept that fills a real need.

Latest Wonder Crop: Square Tomatoes

LOS ANGELES — Farmers have realized a dream: the square tomato.

To be precise, it is not square like a box. But, in the words of William Sims, an agricultural researcher at the University of California-Davis, "It's more square than round."

California growers have begun sowing seeds this year to raise the new tomato, called the UC-82. Researchers say it is hardier and more bountiful than a conventional tomato and — with its squarish shape — is better prepared to survive the bruising of mechanical harvesting and transport from field to cannery in huge glass-fibre containers.

In reduced transit waste alone, Sims said, the new tomato should save California farmers about $20 million a year.

The square tomato was engineered in much the same way that Detroit creates a new car. There were false starts and a little balancing of this and that to come up with a product that would be more profitable. The UC-82 is the latest in a line of new tomato models introduced by the University of California since it started (in agricultural terms) a production revolution in 1961.

Round tomatoes are preferred for the fresh table market. But "they have to be handled like eggs," Sims noted, and are therefore inefficient for high-volume mechanical harvesting.

In the late 1950s the university's researchers bred a new variety of tomato that had a tough skin. For the first time, a crop could be picked economically by machines without unacceptable amounts of waste. To distinguish this variety from previous tomatoes, the new fruit was called a "processing" tomato for use in canning, juice, soup, ketchup, paste and other sauces.

Mostly because of the efficiencies of mechanical harvesting, California's production of tomatoes for this market increased from 1.3 million tons in 1954 to more than 7 million tons in 1975. California now produces more than half of the world's processing tomatoes. The state's tomato growers last year had revenues of close to $500 million.

The tough-skinned tomato, introduced in 1961, is still the standard here. But it has never been completely satisfactory, as Sims explained the other day.

Called the VF 145-B7879, the 1961 tomato proved extremely sensitive to temperature variations, its yield per acre was not so good and its shape was not ideal. Too many tomatoes were being damaged during harvesting and transportation to canneries.

Scientists photographed tomatoes of various shapes being picked by mechanical harvesters. They found that elongated tomatoes lined up better when being moved on conveyor belts. And elongate tomatoes bruised less easily. This was because the stresses of impact, when colliding with other tomatoes, were better dissipated in the walls of the longer tomatoes.

The trouble with the researcher's first attempts at solving the problem was that humans still preferred round tomatoes. Sorters complained that they could not grab an elongated tomato as easily as a round one. The solution was a compromise — a squarish tomato that is mostly oblong, partly flat on the top and bottom, but also partly rounded at the edges to help the sorters.

The first square-round tomato, called the UC-134, was developed largely by Prof. D. C. Hanna at the University's Davis campus four years ago.

This variety wasn't fully satisfactory, either. The tomatoes had to be picked too quickly after ripening, they were overly sensitive to high temperatures and many broke off the vines and were lost during harvesting.

The result was the new UC-82, which was developed by a group headed by Allen Stevens of the Davis faculty. He is currently on leave to teach tomato-growing technology in Israel. His chief assistant, Gerald Dickenson, is still at work on the seven-year project.

The Californians' success in harvesting more tomatoes causes a new problem: Now there may be too many of them. A cannery strike and heavy rains last summer narrowed the state's output from an expected 7 million tons to 5.2 million tons. Otherwise, there would likely have been a surplus. If production trends continue, crop analysts say, California could be turning out 12 million tons or more of tomatoes annually by 1984.

So the industry is looking for new ways to sell tomatoes. Different ways of canning them are being studied in hopes of retaining the flavor of fresh fruit. The possibility of selling frozen tomatoes is being evaluated. And even "tomato chips," something similar to potato chips, are being tested.

Clumsy Children Can Be Helped

Washington Post

If you dream of having a sylphlike ballerina for a daughter or a gracefully aggressive broken-field runner for a son, but the kid can only fall down — take heart. There are things that you can do at home to help build motor coordination, says Dr. Jeanne Snodgrass, a professor at George Washington University.

"By working consistently with the child," she said, "parents can help their clumsy kids to overcome some problems, let others accept theirs and to feel a lot better about themselves."

Snodgrass, who has been dealing with problems of coordination for 15 years, stresses the importances of identifying clumsiness in children and helping them develop good motor skills. She emphasized that the period from ages 3 to 5 is critical because improvements can be begun before the children are at the age where they may be laughed at.

One thing to remember in assessing children's motor skills is that those abilities are developmental. You shouldn't expect three-year-olds to skip. They just haven't learned to balance themselves yet. This isn't clumsy, it's undeveloped. And if there's no real problem, the skill will be learned at the proper time.

"What we mean by clumsy," Snodgrass said, "is a repeated pattern of uncoordinated behavior, difficulty handling balls, problems balancing, frequent falls over a long period of months." If these problems are observed, it may be time to call on your pediatrician for help. The doctor can diagnose perceptual disorders that may be causing the problem.

But, she advised, you should not leave the solution to clumsiness entirely up to your doctor, and gave these tips for helping the clumsy child at home:

—Play "horsie" with your toddler, holding the child firmly seated on your shoulders. Also try holding the child upside down by his or her thighs, letting the child pretend he or she is doing a head-stand. Later on, she said, the child won't feel disoriented by being upside down in athletic activities.

—Put a ladder flat on the floor and let the child crawl in and out of the rungs. Don't be surprised if children seem alarmed when they're inside rungs where there's "nothing."

—Place a rope flat on the floor and let the child try to balance along it. For an older child, shape the rope into a letter or number for this exercise.

—Cut shapes out of large cardboard boxes and let the child crawl in and out of them as in an obstacle course.

—Make yarn balls to be used along with regular ones. Balls of different textures, shapes, sizes and weights provide different development experiences.

—Suspend a rubber ball from the ceiling or a doorway and have the child practice hitting it with a horizontally held bat made from an old broom handle. The bat should be marked with colored bands to be used as targets.

One point to remember, though, Snodgrass said, is that the child should be allowed to figure out how to use these devices alone. Don't demonstrate; the objective is to let him or her learn spontaneously, not to memorize what to do.

Dying Worse Than Death

OTTAWA (CP) — Most terminally ill patients are more afraid of the process of dying than of death itself, says Dr. J. W. Worden, director of the Massachusetts General Hospital Omega project, a study of the psychological and social sides of dying.

"At some point, a patient should have the right to decide how much disability he is prepared to go along with in order to prolong his life for a few more months or even a year," the Harvard psychology professor told a seminar on dying at Ottawa University.

"Many patients are afraid of losing control over personal decisions, especially if they have an obsessibe nature. And they are very much afraid of the progressive disability, which is often a direct result of a treatment program."

Dr. Worden, author of the book Personal Death Awareness, said he has been studying dying patients since the 1960s and has found that medical people must be sensitive to a patient's feelings to determine whether the person wants to talk about his approaching death.

"While the importance of discussing the patient's imminent death has been stressed in recent years, there are some patients who do not want to discuss their dying with doctors, nurses of relatives at all times."

He said in some cases hospital staff members should "break through some of the professionalism" and cry with the patient for a short time.

Dying patients who survive the longest are the ones who were "the easiest to care for, most co-operative with nursing personnel and who always has some mini-hopes to keep them going," Dr. Worden said.

"Such hopes as living long enough to see a child graduate or a daughter married often did much to sustain the patient beyond his expected survival time."

Difficult, unco-operative patients who even wished death to claim them, frequently died much sooner than expected, he said.

Dr. Worden said he has noticed a curious phenomenon among dying patients which he calls "middle knowledge."

"This is a situation wherein you have been discussing openly the impending death of the patient and he has accepted the fact and then suddenly one day tells you that when he gets better he's going to sell his business and take a trip around the world."

This sudden reversal and denial is usually followed by the person's death in 24 to 48 hours, he said.

CAR MAKER BOWS ON JESUS SHOW

NEW YORK — General Motors says it found nothing objectionable in the two-part NBC television drama, Jesus of Nazareth, but the giant automaker bowed to pressure from fundamentalist Protestants and dropped sponsorhsip of the program.

A GM spokesman said Monday the firm "decided not to exercise its option to sponsor the television special."

NBC said it was trying to line up new sponsorship for the six-hour production scheduled for broadcast on Palm and Easter Sundays.

A national fundamentalist protest began when Rev. John Dekker, pastor of Cub Hill Bible Presbyterian Church of Baltimore, urged listeners on his radio program, In Defence of Truth, to complain to NBC and General Motors of a "misrepresentation of Jesus."

Dekker said he had "never seen the thing," but he launched the appeal because producer Franco Zeffirelli allegedly said of the film, "the public has never wanted to accept Jesus as a man but only as a God."

"We believe that if we're going to have a representation of Christ at Easter, let's have the Christ of Scripture rather than the Christ of Zeffirelli," Dekker said.

Lottery Grant Mennonite Quandary

KITCHENER, Ont. — The Mennonite Conference of Ontario, which condemns lotteries on moral and religious grounds, has conditionally accepted a $250,000 grant from Wintario.

At a meeting, 140 delegates in attendance accepted the grant after being told rejecting it might delay building of a $3.4-million senior citizen's community centre in Cambridge, Ont.

After five hours of debate, they agreed to take the money on condition that the conference look into ways of repaying it.

The executive of the Mennonite Council, representing 4,500 members, said in a statement distributed at the meeting:

"We see the lottery system exploiting the poor, entrapping gambling addicts and bringing misfortune to some of the winners."

Clayton Cressman, chairman of the board of directors of senior citizens home, said in a statement to delegates he saw no difference between accepting Wintario money and other government funds.

The board has used provincial building and operating grants without "passing judgment on how governments acquire funds (sales taxes, tobacco, liquor, gambling, etc.)."

KIRITSIS FIT FOR TRIAL

INDIANAPOLIS — Anthony Kiritsis is legally sane and competent to stand trial for holding a real eatate executive hostage with a gun wired to his head for 63 hours last month, a court-appointed psychiatrist said Monday. Kiritsis is being held in the abduction of Richard Hall from his Indianapolis office at shotgun point last month.

CKVU Growing...Thanks to Roots

VANCOUVER — CKVU, Vancouver's newest television station, says it is the top-rated station in the city after only six months on the air.

The station has borrowed some muscle from KOMO, the Seattle, Wash, station, the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission and the seven-part series Roots to vault over its competitors and become Vancouver-s most-watched station —for now.

The January-February Neilsen television broadcast index for Vancouver clearly shows CKVU right at the top. Last fall CKVU was at the bottom.

"The place where they grew was Roots," said Ray Peters, president of CHAN-TV; the British Columbia television station that usually occupies top spot.

"The ratings were taken in a two-week period and on seven of the 14 days, Roots was on."

Peters said Monday he would be willing to bet that most of the people who watched CKVU during the Roots shows; actually had their television sets tuned to Channel 4, KOMO.

This would be because the CRTC requires cable companies to carry the signals of Canadian stations when programs are being simultaneously broadcast on United States stations.

KOMO was broadcasting Roots in Seattle, but in Vancouver, cable companies replaced the KOMO signal with CKVU's Roots and CKVU's commercials.

"They got 60 per cent of the audience on the last Sunday Roots was on," said Peters.

"That's over 501,000 people watching. And most of them were watching on KOMO."

CKVU president Daryl Duke would not predict March ratings but he said he was not planning on being at the bottom again either.

He agreed that Roots had pushed his station to the top, but he argued that Odd Couple, Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman and the Vancouver show had helped.

CKVU will not rest easily at the top of the pile, he said. "Being number one in a competitive market like this is not something you take for granted."

When the Sharks Hit ...'Bloody Nightmare'

Wife visits Harrison in hospital

SYDNEY, Australia — Verdon Harrison and two friends were on a weekend fishing trip when a freighter sliced through their 26-foot cabin cruiser in the darkness.

Harrison, 32, told police the collision in Morton Bay, 10 miles north of Brisbane, cut their boat in half, forcing the three to scramble aboard a splintered icebox.

Two days later the sharks came.

"A coupleof the big ones came in for the kill," he said. "How I escaped I'll never know."

"It was a bloody nightmare."

He said Victor Beaver — the first man attacked — shouted, "Goodbye, mates, this is it," as a 20-foot shark dragged him out to sea.

The shark then lunged at John Hays, ripping off his arm and pulling him from the makeshift raft.

But, said Harrison, Hays struggled back onto the icebox and said, "I gouged his eye out ... He won't be back."

Harrison then tried to apply a tourniquet to Hays' bleeding limb, but the shark struck again, grabbing Hays for a second time.

"I tried to climb into the icebox for safety, but this big bastard tried to climb in with me. Just then my rescuers came along."

A Brisbane hospital spokesman said Harrison was in satisfactory condition and under heavy sedation.

"He had bad bruising under the arms from clinging to the icebox, cuts to the legs from the bites of smaller sharks, and was suffering from exposure," the spkesman said.

This Charlie Brown Just Didn't Give Up

NEW YORK — Perhaps he had just finished reading Charles Schulz's The Unsinkable Charlie Brown.

According to police, Charles Brown, 27, of Manhattan made three attempts to rob a bank Monday and failed each time.

"He just wouldn't quit," a police department spokesman said.

It began at 11:30 a.m., when the weaponless suspect allegedly strolled in to a branch of the Chemical Bank and handed the teller a note demanding $1,500.

"The teller told him she didn't have that much," the spokesman said. Brown quietly picked up his note and left, he said.

The suspect decided to try his luck again, police said.

At 1:10 p.m., he entered a European-American Bank branch and slipped his note to the teller, "but she got excited and dropped to the floor," according to police.

Brown snatched back his note and left.

Undaunted, Brown allegedly moved down the street to a Citibank branch.

"This time he had a little luck. He got $700," the spokesman said.

But as Brown left the bank, two employees followed him and tackled him on the street, according to police.

Brown was turned over to the FBI and was to be charged with attempted bank robbery.

Shooting Victim

CHICAGO (AP) — Leon Hillard, a dribbling specialist for a number of years with the Harlem Globetrotters basketball team, was shot and killed at his home Monday night, police said. Hillard, 45, was shot in the back of the head.

Police said Hillard's wife, Sandra, 28, was being questioned in connection with the shooting.

Don't Stuff Granny In the Boot

MUNICH — If grandma dies while the family is soaking up the sun on Spain's Costa del Sol this summer, do not stuff her in the car trunk to get her home.

The West German Automobile Club says this happened several times recently, when family members had no idea where to turn for help.

"It is forbidden to transport a corpse in one's own car trunk and a heavy fine results if one is caught at it," the club said.

They suggested that Germans who find themselves in such a situation contact the nearest West German consulate.

ROLLING STONE

A 'New' Beatles Album in the Works

BY CHARLES YOUNG

A new Beatle album, put together from recordings made at the height of Beatlemania, has just been completed. The package, with 13 songs from their 1964 to 1965 performances at the Hollywood Bowl (which include Twist and Shout, Help, A Hard Day's Night and Can't Buy Me Love) is not yet guaranteed of release, but is awaiting the group's approval.

"John Lennon heard it last week and was delighted with it," said George Martinu, the Fab Four's longtime producer, who assembled the album for EMI Records.

"I don't know if Paul's heard it. If he doesn't like it, then it probably won't be issued."

McCartney is in London working on a new album. If EMI gets their okays, the live Beatles LP might be out by April.

"I was reluctant to delve into the past," said Martin. "But I must say that, although technically they were pretty awful, hearing the boys' voices in those days and the excitement of it all was really amazing. It was a labor of love, like restoring an antique motor car."

The tapes were in dubious condition after more than a decade of storage.

Also, some detective work was required to find an old three-track machine to accommodate the half-inch original tapes before they could be transferred to a modern 24-track machine for re-editing. A vacuum cleaner exhaust served as an improvised cooler for the three-track unit, which was overheating.

"The '65 concert didn't differ very much from the '64," said Martin. "After hearing it, John Lennon said, "We did all that rubbish again? That's all we did in those days?" "

Dickie Betts has settled his long and debilitating lawsuit with Phil Walden, president of Capricorn Records, who had maintained that all the Allman Brothers were signed to him individually as well as collectively after the band had broken up.

The out-of-court agreement has been described as "quite advantageous" to Betts and clears the way for Arista to release the first album by Betts and his new band, Great Southern, at the end of March . . . Walden, meanwhile, has been talking to aides of President Carter about having a White House invitation extended to Bob Dylan, who is getting sued for divorce by wife Sara.

Still on the subject of Bob Dylan: Several gossip columns have published the item that his $2 million mansion at Malibu is sliding into the ocean because of erosion.

"That's impossible," says the house's architect Dave Towbin. "The house can't slip. It's built on normal earth, not sand. It's across the road from the beach. They do have a tremendous view of the ocean, though."

If the house, which has been described as "an electric version of an East Coast stick-and-shingle house . . . basically American Victorian and Mediterranean, and pure New Mexico inside," were to fall into the Pacific, it would have to carry with it a swimming pool that one building inspector has described as "a lake. It has bridges and boulders."

"If that house goes into the ocean," maintains Towbin, "it means all the coast of California is going."

Led Zeppelin has postponed and reshuffled its spring tour. Robert Plant has tonsilitis and a high temperature. The tour is now scheduled to start April 1 . . . Heart is in Portland, recording a follow-up o their million-selling debut LP. It's tentatively called Magazine and Portrait Records is planning to produce . . . Southside Johnny and the Asbury Jukes make their movie debut in Between the Lines, scheduled to premier on April 27. The plot concerns an underground newspaper that makes good and gets bought by a conglomerate—much in the manner of the Boston Phoenix. The Jukes' new album, tentatively titled "This Time It's for Real, is to be released at the end of this month and will include several songs by Miami Steve Van Zandt and Bruce Springsteen.

Also appearing on the record are the current incarnations of the Coasters, Drifters and Five Satins.

Singer Ruth Copeland, last heard from trying out for the lead role in Pearl, a movie version of the life of Janis Joplin, is working with old friend Sly Stone on another potential movie. It's an idea of hers, she says, a rock opera called Samson Jones, of Samson and you-know-who fame, but set in Harlem in 1967 and with the central figure based on Malcolm X.

"Sly and me will do the lyrics and round up all the artists," she says—they're talking to Bobby Womack and the Shirelles (Copeland produces the group) — and hope to go from album to theatre to film.

As for Pearl, it's stalled. One principal in Janis' past wants too much of a cut, Copeland says, and the people behind the project "were scared off by the Star Is Born garbage."

Stored Paints Spark Fires

FITCHBURG, Mass. (AP) — Stored plastics and plant were believed responsible for explosions that levelled a warehouse in this town, about 15 miles northwest of Clinton where President Carter plans to spend Wednesday night, police said.

The seven explosions Monday night also started a fire that destroyed two neighboring buildings.

RICHARD REMAND

TORONTO (CP) — Keith Richard, lead guitarist with the Rolling Stones rock music group, was remanded to June 27 when he appeared in provincial court Monday on charges of possession of heroin for trafficking and possession of cocaine.

Free on $25,000 bail, Richard arrived in court in a blue velvet suit with white scarf, accompanied by his lawyer Clay Powell and a U.S. lawyer, William Carter.

With about 50 fans in the courtroom, Judge Joseph Addison agreed to a request from Crown Attorney David Scott for the remand to a special courtroom.

Powell said the remand date would be for trial or preliminary hearing and the judge agreed.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

In duplicate bridge, where scoring is on a relative basis, notrump is the preferred contract at all echelons of play, since notrump counts more than spades, hearts, diamonds or clubs. But, on occasion, notrump is the inferior contract, as was demonstrated in today's deal.

	NORTH
	♠ J 2
	♡ J 8 5 3
	◇ Q 8 7 4
	♣ 9 5 2
WEST		EAST
♠ K 8 5 3		♠ 10 9 6 4
♡ 10 7 4		♡ Q 9 2
◇ J 9 2		◇ 10 6 5 3
♣ 8 7 6		♣ 4 3
	SOUTH
	♡ A K 6
	◇ A K
	♣ A K Q J 10

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 ♠	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Eight of ♣.

At most of the tables South opened the bidding with four notrump, showing 28-30 high-card points. North raised to five notrump inviting South to bid a small slam if the latter had a maximum opening bid. South, having a super-maximum hand, cheerfully accepted the invitation.

The six-notrump contract proved unmakable, since South could never reach dummy to cash the diamond queen. All South could make were two spade tricks, two hearts, two diamonds and five clubs.

At one table (the bidding is presented above), South arrived at a six-club contract. West got off to a trump opening lead, South winning the trick with his ten. The spade queen was then led, West's king winning. The jack of spades had just become an entry to the North hand (for the cashing of the diamond queen and the discarding of South's losing heart).

But West, upon taking his spade king, promptly "killed" South's entry to the board by returning a spade, dummy's jack capturing the trick. Declarer next led another trump to his jack, picking up East's remaining trump, and leaving West with the trump seven.

The ace and king of diamonds were now cashed, and this was followed by the luxury of trumping South's ace of spades with dummy's remaining trump. On the diamond queen, South tossed away his six of hearts. A heart was then led to South's ace, and West's last trump was gathered in. Mission accomplished.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Wednesday, March 16

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Achievement is keynoted — you win friends, influence people, find wishes fulfilled and have authority to put policies into operation. Capricorn, Cancer figure prominently. Lovers' disagreement should not be blown up out of proportion. What seems a split will be mended — to your advantage.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Finish what you initiate. Aries, Libra play key roles. Accent on security, financial review regarding taxes, insurance, investments — basic issues are settled. Law is on your side. Know it and be confident. You are due for wider recognition.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Give full play to creative talents — make new starts in independent manner. Leo, Aquarius persons are part of scenario. Check messages, communications. Take nothing for granted where quotes, rights and permissions are concerned.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Involvement is keynoted. Follow through on intuition. An Aquarian could present a problem and aid in resolving it. Your ability to adjust to what seems a bizarre situation is tested, demonstrated. Check budget. Someone is tempted to want something for nothing at your expense.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Diversify — find different ways of achieving, reaching goal. Enlarge horizons. Deal with "visionaries." Means refuse to be limited — the sky is the limit! Accent on legalities, cooperative efforts, firm commitment from conservative member of community.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You are challenged. Key is to say what you mean and say it in frank, sincere manner. Older person, used to doing things in one way, almost pleads for your co-operation. Get off high horse without abandoning principles. Message will become crystal-clear!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Money and emotions may not mix too well — key is to be analytical. Changes are required, but logic should be given equal time with impulse. Gemini, Virgo and Scorpio individuals figure in picture. Study messages, documents — you can help resolve dillemma through written word.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Check with family member regarding property, home base, values, decision affecting land, conclusion of transaction. Taurus, Libra individuals are part of your personal scenario. If diplomatic, you gain more than you would be forcing, chiding. Know it and act accordingly.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Forces tend to be scattered. If you don't know what to do, do nothing. Ride with tide. Steer clear of dispute with relatives. Pisces, Virgo individuals figure prominently. Take time to perfect techniques. Don't confuse "bad dream" with reality.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You get money's worth, although this may be difficult to believe due to minor changes, irritations, added costs. Setback will boomerang in your favor. Organize, bring priorities into focus. Invest in your own abilities, talent, interests.

AQUARIUS (Jan 20-Feb. 18): You can skip over petty details — perceive project as a whole. One you respect consults you. Views are vindicated. Long-distance call, message, portend better times ahead. You are rid of worry, burden.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You get "second chance:" You make new contacts, friends. Personal magnetism flows; individual who was indifferent will now show marked interest in you. Keep promise to person who is temporarily confined to home or hospital.

IF MARCH 16th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are perceptive, psychic, sensitive, having acting ability and you gain greater recognition in 1977, especially in October. Pisces, Virgo persons play important roles in your life. It is not easy for others to fool you — but you tend to deceive yourself by seeing what you want to see. You are fascinated by illusion, film, make-believe; you're capable of delighting people by sharing your vision of the world.

Short Parsnips More Popular

Parsnips are not what they used to be. There was a time when it was thought that well grown parsnips should have a length of at least thirty inches.

Generations of gardeners have trenched their soil two spades deep and even put it through a screen to obtain perfectly straight roots of this length.

In heavy soils or stoney ground it was the practice to drive a crowbar 36 inches into the soil to make a hole three inches or so wide at the top, then fill it with finely screened compost to ensure long straight roots.

This practice is still followed by those who grow for the show bench, but for the home gardener who grows a few parsnips to enjoy over winter such energetic endeavors are no longer necessary.

It was never clear to me why the perfect parsnip had to be so long and slim when two-thirds of the root was

Today parsnips may be short, medium, or long, and the short varieties are gaining in popularity with both the gardener and the cook.

These are three inches of more in diameter at the top with a total length of nine to 12 inches, every inch of which is usable.

Most of us were brought up on the variety Hollow Crown, and one of the newer short varieties is a selection of this old standby named Hollow Crown Improved.

The flesh is clear white, the roots smooth, well formed, and of excellent texture. The tops are short, which means less space covered with foliage, a feature worth considering when the vegetable patch is small.

For shallow soils the variety called Short Thick has been developed. While its shape seems somewhat grotesque to an old-time parsnip grower, it does well in any soil and has found great favor with imaginative cooks who produce an excellent supper by lightly browning the large circles in oil or butter.

Parsnips are a long usason vegetable. The seed is sown thinly as soon as the soil can be prepared, about five inches apart in a row.

Since parsnip seed takes quite a while to germinate, radish seed is sown at the same time in the same row. The radish germinate quickly, mark the row, and prevent a hard crust forming on the soil which can further delay the appearance of the parsnips.

Some home gardeners prefer to sow a few early lettuce seed in the row instead of radish. Some of the seedlings are transplanted as needed, and as the remainder get too large for transplanting they are used as leaf lettuce in early salads.

It is a good idea to sow parsnip seed near a path where the crop can be easily reached in winter without having to walk on muddy soil.

The first roots are dug in late fall after a few frosts which improve the flavor. The balance of the crop is lifted as needed throughout the winter until new growth appears in the spring. When that happens the roots are cut into small pieces and discarded to the compost.

$766,118 IN APPEAL

Audited results of last fall's United Way campaign in Greater Victoria show returns of $766,118 in cash collected and money pledged.

Another Bus Warning

A familiar warning emerged today from City Hall — the tour buses' days on the Causeway are numbered.

Statements to that effect have been made by city aldermen for at least six years, but this time council apparently intends to carry out the threat.

The traffic and transportation committee recommended allocation of two parking spaces on the Causeway outside the Empress Hotel to Marguerite Tours Ltd., which opened for business late last season with a converted San Francisco trolley car.

But committee chairman Ald. Helen Biernes warned that it would be only a temporary measure.

In the near future council must "look to their removal completely off the streets," she said, and sightseeing tour operators should be found an off-street operational base.

Traffic engineer Derek Wild suggested the city ask the provincial government to provide such an area when it relocates the Black Ball ferry terminal from its present site to the other side of the Inner Harbor.

Marguerite Tours president Jim Gorst, the ex-MLA, was unhappy with the committee's decision.

On leaving the meeting he told reporters two vehicle spaces are inadequate because he plans to operate six tour buses.

Target for the campaign had been $800,000 but the total represents an increase of $71,705 over what was collected the previous year.

Following is a list of what has been allocated member agencies for 1977, with last year's allocation in brackets.

Alano Club of Victoria — $16,446 ($13,447).

Big Brothers — Big Sisters — $24,000 ($17,000. Big Sisters is a new program this year.

Boys' and Girls' Club of Greater Victoria — $54,000 ($51,000).

Boys' and Girls' Club of Langford — $13,780 ($13,000).

Boy Scouts — $46,434 ($43,806).

Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society — $36,500 ($35,000).

Canadian Mental Health Association — $41,351 ($37,783).

Canadian National Institute for the Blind — $40,000 ($40,000).

Contact Community Assistance Society — $1,050 ($1,450).

Greater Victoria Association for the Retarded — $28,620 ($27,000).

G. R. Pearkes Clinic for Handicapped Children — $54,000 ($50,000).

Meals on Wheels — $2,800 ($2,600).

Need-Crisis Line — $8,000 ($6,000).

Red Cross Society — $104,843 ($104,415).

St. John Ambulance — $25,000 ($23,468).

St. Vincent de Paul Society — $17,100 ($14,000).

Silver Threads Service — $35,000 ($32,000).

S.P.C.A. (Victoria branch) — $750 ($750).

Victoria Native Indian Friendship Centre — $10,500 ($9,266).

Victoria Multiple Sclerosis Society — $31,625 ($31,625).

Victoria Volunteer Society — $5,842 ($4,480).

Youth Programs at YM-YWCA — $111,300 ($105,000).

United Way executive director Stuart Drummond said today that cost of the campaign and year-round administration for 1977 has been budgetted at $78,995.

Annual meeting of United Way will be march 23 at 12 noon in the Silver Threads building, 4 Centennial Square.

The meeting is open to the public, he said, but it is a luncheon meeting which will cost $3.50 and people wanting to attend should make reservations in advance by phoning 385-6708.

Tea at Empress . . .

Taste of Freedom

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Tea at the Empress.

Small tables in the foyer. Large white linen cloths. Shiny silver service and big pots of tea, each spouting steamy wraiths of scent from India, China and Ceylon.

It's a 3 p.m. ritual, as fixed an event as the changing of the guard at Buckingham Palace or the tolling of Big Ben.

It is one of the better kept traditions of our colonial heritage. An oasis of gentle calm, an institution most Victorians, if they think about it at all, take for granted.

Over in the corner by the fireplace is a long table set for 25 people. At first glance it looks oddly out of place amidst the small individual tables and wingback chairs.

Almost all the places at the big table are taken. The people there sit upright and still and they speak softly.

Then you notice the wheelchairs. Thirteen of them.

Tea today at the Empress is for the crippled, the lame and the handicapped.

They do not take it for granted. They have looked forward to this event for days, weeks. For some of them, it is an event that frees them — if only for a few hours — from an institutional routine.

For a brief spell, they are part of the elegant atmosphere of one of Western Canada's most famous rituals.

Francis T. Jones, born in London in 1893, sits with his back to the big front windows. Nearby is his wife, Kate, her full grey hair carefully arranged, framing bright eyes that seem to look over his head from across the linen.

Beside her is Ontario-born Mrs. Susan Smith, who once stayed at the Empress more than 20 years ago.

All three now live at Memorial Pavilion, where they are well cared for, but where outings depend on friends with cars or sturdy arms and legs for wheelchair walks.

They are here today because of the Victoria Society for the Recreation of Handicapped Persons, which provides the young volunteers for escorts and special buses for wheelchair passengers.

Most of the other guests are from Gorge Road Hospital.

The Jones have been married for more than 45 years, and unlike some in their circumstances they are still able to be together — almost. He lives in Memorial's men's section, his wife in separate quarters at the pavilion.

He has lost most of the use of his legs, having been blown up at Etampes, France, in 1918. The nerves were affected and he spent two years in an army hospital. Now arthritis has set in.

"I get about a little on my two sticks," he says.

They might have held out on their own a little longer, but, Frank explains, his wife had a stroke.

And she is blind.

"He comes up and sees me every day," says Kate, and asks Frank if her tea has arrived.

Is it sometimes boring at the hospital? Do they tire of the basketry, the doll-making, the card games?

"Well, yes, but we make the best of it," Frank replies.

Kate reads some Braille. She used to get talking books when she was able to visit the Canadian National Institute for the Blind but since being confined to a wheelchair, it is no longer convenient.

"Except for a bit of arthritis, I maintain fairly decent health," Frank says with a touch of pride.

The tea has arrived, poured carefully by an attentive waitress who heaps before them hot buttered crumpets, chicken, ham and cheese sandwiches with the crusts removed, and iced white layer cake.

Most of the fruit salad has disappeared. The rest soon follows.

Peter Menzies and Suzanne Simard are in charge of the group.

They enjoy the tea with their wheelchair friends and are looking forward to the next assignment.

"The Jones are great fun," says Peter.

"I think we'll have too make this a regular feature," says Suzanne. Everyone likes it.

But there's a problem. Organizing events like the Empress affair takes money. And money is hard to come by for the people who work for the society.

That's where you come in.

The Times this month, in co-operation with CJVI, is sponsoring a campaign for operating funds for the recreation society.

Based in a storefront office at 2535 Government, the society has a staff of eight and is helped by about 80 volunteers.

It conducts 17 recreation programs for handicapped children, teenagers and adults, serving about 200 each month.

But government grants which have provided most of the financing have nearly expired.

HUGHES WAS ONLY WORTH $168 MILLION

LAS VEGAS (UPI) — Howard Hughes left an estate worth $168,834,165, far less than generally believed, according to documents filed Tuesday with the Nevada District Court.

The worth of the late industrialist's estate was declared in papers filed by Attorney William Morse with the Clark County clerk's office on the March 15 deadline.

It was the first actual public declaration of Hughes' estate which had been estimated in newspapers and magazine stories at from $2.5 billion to more than $4 billion.

Hijacker Heads For Turin

ZURICH (UPI) — Italian auto mechanic Luciano Porcari, who hijacked a Spanish airliner to Africa and back to Europe, ordered the plane to return to Turin, Italy, tonight after six dramatic hours at Zurich airport.

Swiss police at Zurich airport said the Iberian airlines Boeing 727 left at 7.19 p.m. (10.19 a.m. PST).

Porcari said he was taking it to Turin where he had been earlier today.

Porcari, who hijacked the plane Monday with 37 persons on board, freed 14 hostages today in stops at Turin and Zurich.

He had recovered a 3-year-old daughter in Abidjan, Ivory Coast and tried futilely to see another daughter in Turin.

Earlier today the hijacker had forced the Iberia airlines plane to fly from Turin to Zurich. When Swiss officials initially refused to refuel the plane he ordered it to take off again but it returned to Zurich in half an hour.

When the plane headed back for Turin tonight there were 15 passengers and 7 crew members on the aircraft, plus Porcari and his 3-year-old illegitimate daugh-

932,000 OUT OF WORK

Jobless Spirals To 19-Year High

OTTAWA (CP) — Unemployment in February soared to a new high of 932,000 actual jobless, compared with 800,000 a year ago, Statistics Canada reported today.

The unemployment rate, adjusted for seasonal factors, jumped substantially to 7.9 per cent, equalling the worst monthly level on record back in June, 1958.

February is the first month ever recorded by Statistics Canada in which the number of jobless exceeded 900,000. The figures are sure to prompt renewed calls upon the government to do something about worsening unemployment.

The agency began collecting job statistics in 1958.

In January, the actual total of unemployed was 889,000 and the seasonally-adjusted jobless rate, which is used to predict trends in the labor force, was 7.5 per cent.

In February, 1976, the seasonally-adjusted jobless rate was seven per cent.

Despite the national trend, the unemployment rate in B.C. dropped to 8.2 per cent, a decline of six-tenths of one per cent from January. There were 103,000 jobless in B.C. in February out of a labor force listed by Statistics Canada at 1,117,000. That compared to 112,000 unemployed in January and 109,000 jobless in February, 1976.

Former NDP labor minister Bill King said today it is significant that while the number of unemployed in B.C. has declined, so has the labor force.

King said that 10,000-person decrease in the labor force for February is the first time since the Second World War that the work force has declined.

"The biggest indicator of real growth in the economy is the growth of the labor force," he said.

B.C. workers, because of frustration and lack of confidence in the economy, have taken their expensive skills to Alberta, King said, where the labor force in February increased by 11,000.

Premier Bill Bennett said he would not comment on monthly statistics but only on employment trends over the period of several months.

Meanwhile in a report released today, the Canadian Council on Social Development warned that the country could be faced with a politically and economically explosive situation if nothing is done to ease severe unemployment among young people.

The jobless rate for men 15 to 24 rose by seven-tenths of one per cent to 14.5 per cent and was up 1.4 per cent to 14.2 per cent for women 15 to 24.

While the unemployment level was well up over February, 1976, the total number of persons with jobs also rose to 9,290,000 from 9,178,000.

But the total of new jobs of 112,000 fell well short of targets for job-creation set by the government in its last budget. Last May, Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said the government hoped the number of jobs would rise by 250,000 in a year.

A new budget is to be brought in on March 31 and Macdonald has said it will be mildly stimulative to expand growth in the economy.

The actual unemployment rate for February, Statistics Canada said, was 9.1 per cent, compared with eight per cent in the same month a year ago.

Unemployment rose chiefly among men aged 25 and over, and both women and men aged 15 to 24. The jobless rate for women 25 and over remained steady at seven per cent.

The jobless rate for men 25 and over rose by three-tenths of one per cent to 4.7 per cent.

Unemployment rates rose in six provinces, with the Atlantic provinces and Manitoba especially hard-hit, while the rates declined in four provinces, mostly in the West.

Newfoundland kept its hold as the province with the worst unemployment, with the rate soaring by 1.5 per cent from January to 15.1 per cent.

Nova Scotia had the second-largest increase in unemployment with the rate there rising by 1.1 per cent to 11 per cent.

MILK GOING UP

An industry-wide two-cent hike in the retail price of milk is forecast by Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt.

Fred Mockford, assistant general manager of Island Farms Dairies in Victoria agreed today with Hewitt's statement that factors in the industry will cause a price hike but said he is unable to predict when it will come.

He said there are too many variables to make exact predictions, but added a two cent per litre price hike in the near future is "fairly definite."

The last price hike was in September, 1976. In Victoria, homo milk retails for about dictions, but added a two-cent litre depending on the store and the quantity purchased.

The amount the dairies pay to the farmers is calculated on a month-to-month basis. Increases are absorbed by the dairy until such time the incent per litre and then the cent per litre and then the hike is passed on to the consumer, Mockford said.

Over the seven months since the last retail price increase, the cost of raw milk to the dairies has gone up, he added.

Wages in the industry are another factor.

Dairy workers in the Fraser Valley dairies receive a six per cent increase April 1.

Vancouver Island contracts run to September, but with the uncertainty of the future of the Anti-Inflation Board regulations, Mockford said he could make no predictions on labor's effect on the price of milk.

Saccharin Ban Leak Sparked Sugar Profits

TORONTO (CP) — News of an impending ban on saccharin was leaked from the office of Health Minister Marc Lalonde several days before a joint Canada-United States announcement of the ban, according to the Toronto Sun.

The newspaper says dozens of speculators who received advance notice of the ban on the artificial sweetener made profits buying sugar company shares and sugar futures, which rose after the announcement.

Sun columnist Morton Shulman says he was a benefactor of the leak and made a few thousand dollars trading on shares of Redpath Sugar, which rose following the announcement to $14.25 from $13.12.

Shulman says he heard of the ban four hours before it was announced last Wednesday.

He says one Toronto businessman who knew of the ban purchased 35 million pounds of sugar on the futures market at 8.7 cents a pound on the morning of the announcement. He says the man resold most of the holdings the following day for 9.2 cents, earning about $175,000.

In Ottawa, Rene Mercier, spokesman for Lalonde, denied allegations that the leak started in Ottawa. He said Lalonde believes the disclosure originated in the U.S.

"The sugar stocks in the U.S. were reacting to rumors as early as the Friday prior to the announcement," he said.

The ban on saccharin was announced after studies linked the sweetener to cancer. After July 1, soft drinks containing saccharin will be removed from Canadian supermarket shelves.

THE NOMINEES

Eleanor Hendriks Witmer
Copyright 1977 Toronto Sun Syndicate

Best Actress nominee Marie-Christine Barrault (Cousin, Cousine) is another newcomer to the North American film audience. She is, however, no stranger to European moviegoers.

Ms. Barrault was born in Paris into a talented family but was not brought up in a theatrical atmosphere. In 1964 she entered the Conservatoire National d'Art Dramatique where she studied acting for two years. Since then she has carved out a successful career for herself in television, theatre and film in Europe. Her films include Pierre Richard's Le Distrait and Eric Rohmer's Ma Nuit Chez Maud.

In the role of Marthe in Jean-Charles Tacchella's Cousin, Cousine, Ms. Barrault gives a profoundly sensitive portrayal of a woman involved in a forbidden love situation.

The competition is stiff in this year's Academy Awards contest and consequently Ms. Barrault's chances of winning appear to be slim at best.

Endure Long Strikes: AIB

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Company presidents must toughen their backbones and resist large wage increases when federal controls end next year, Anti-Inflation Board vice president June Menzies said Monday.

"Companies must be prepared to endure long strikes, if necessary, rather than give in," she said in an interview.

"Otherwise all that has been gained during the three years will be lost."

Companies have been leaning on the AIB regulations rather than learning to be tough, she said.

They have been telling unions: "We would like to give you more but the AIB won't let us."

The time is coming soon when they will have to stiffen their backs and say "No."

Federal Labor Minister John Munro said in Vancouver Monday a joint meeting of government, business and labor leaders will be held in April to discuss termination of controls.

"I can't recall when business and labor have met at the national level before."

Menzies said it is unlikely wage and price controls could be reintroduced once they are dismantled next year.

"People must realize we have beten very lucky with the controls program. There are two things. First, the unions verbally opposed the controls but, in practice, they supported them—better than we could have dared to hope.

"Second, the recession coincided with the controls program. Because of the recession, we are in a good position to stand the shock of exit. In the United States, the economy was still surging when their program ended and all the gains disappeared when the program ended."

The same could happen in Canada, despite the recession, unless companies stand firm and insist that wage increases be linked to higher productivity.

She said the schedule for ending controls is still being debated.

The phase-out could begin on Jan. 2, 1978, with each company emerging from controls at the end of its fiscal year after that date. For most companies, this would mean the end of controls at the end of 1978.

Similarly, unions would come out at the end of their contract after Jan. 2, if the proposal is adopted.

The government is committed to end the controls program in 1978.

The target for inflation at the end of the controls program is four per cent, a goal that may be reached in 1978 if companies and unions cooperate.

Most of the other guests are from Gorge Road Hospital.

The Jones have been married for more than 45 years, and unlike some in their circumstances they are still able to be together — almost. He lives in Memorial's men's section, his wife in separate quarters at the pavilion.

He has lost most of the use of his legs, having been blown up at Etampes, France, in 1918. The nerves were affected and he spent two years in an army hospital. Now arthritis has set in.

"I get about a little on my two sticks," he says.

They might have held out on their own a little longer, but, Frank explains, his wife had a stroke.

And she is blind.

"He comes up and sees me every day," says Kate, and asks Frank if her tea has arrived.

Is it sometimes boring at the hospital? Do they tire of the basketry, the doll-making, the card games?

"Well, yes, but we make the best of it," Frank replies.

Kate reads some Braille. She used to get talking books when she was able to visit the Canadian National Institute for the Blind but since being confined to a wheelchair, it is no longer convenient.

"Except for a bit of arthritis, I maintain fairly decent health," Frank says with a touch of pride.

The tea has arrived, poured carefully by an attentive waitress who heaps before them hot buttered crumpets, chicken, ham and cheese sandwiches with the crusts removed, and iced white layer cake.

Most of the fruit salad has disappeared. The rest soon follows.

Peter Menzies and Suzanne Simard are in charge of the group.

They enjoy the tea with their wheelchair friends and are looking forward to the next assignment.

"The Jones are great fun," says Peter.

"I think we'll have too make this a regular feature," says Suzanne. Everyone likes it.

But there's a problem. Organizing events like the Empress affair takes money. And money is hard to come by for the people who work for the society.

That's where you come in.

The Times this month, in cooperation with CJVI, is sponsoring a campaign for operating funds for the recreation society.

Based in a storefront office at 2535 Government, the society has a staff of eight and is helped by about 80 volunteers.

It conducts 17 recreation programs for handicapped children, teenagers and adults, serving about 200 each month.

But government grants which have provided most of the financing have nearly expired.

HUGHES WAS ONLY WORTH $168 MILLION

LAS VEGAS (UPI) — Howard Hughes left an estate worth $168,834,165, far less than generally believed, according to documents filed Tuesday with the Nevada District Court.

The worth of the late industrialist's estate was declared in papers filed by Attorney William Morse with the Clark County clerk's office on the March 15 deadline.

It was the first actual public declaration of Hughes' estate which had been estimated in newspapers and magazine stories at from $2.5 billion to more than $4 billion.

Hijacker Heads For Turin

ZURICH (UPI) — Italian auto mechanic Luciano Porcari, who hijacked a Spanish airliner to Africa and back to Europe, ordered the plane to return to Turin, Italy, tonight after six dramatic hours at Zurich airport.

Swiss police at Zurich airport said the Iberian airlines Boeing 727 left at 7.19 p.m. (10.19 a.m. PST).

Porcari said he was taking it to Turin where he had been earlier today.

Porcari, who hijacked the plane Monday with 37 persons on board, freed 14 hostages today in stops at Turin and Zurich.

He had recovered a 3-year-old daughter in Abidjan, Ivory Coast and tried futilely to see another daughter in Turin.

Earlier today the hijacker had forced the Iberia airlines plane to fly from Turin to Zurich. When Swiss officials initially refused to refuel the plane he ordered it to take off again but it returned to Zurich in half an hour.

When the plane headed back for Turin tonight there were 15 passengers and 7 crew members on the aircraft, plus Porcari and his 3-year-old illegitimate daughter.

932,000 OUT OF WORK

Jobless Spirals To 19-Year High

OTTAWA (CP) — Unemployment in February soared to a new high of 932,000 actual jobless, compared with 800,000 a year ago, Statistics Canada reported today.

The unemployment rate, adjusted for seasonal factors, jumped substantially to 7.9 per cent, equalling the worst monthly level on record back in June, 1958.

February is the first month ever recorded by Statistics Canada in which the number of jobless exceeded 900,000. The figures are sure to prompt renewed calls upon the government to do something about worsening unemployment.

The agency began collecting job statistics in 1953.

In January, the actual total of unemployed was 889,000 and the seasonally-adjusted jobless rate, which is used to predict trends in the labor force, was 7.5 per cent.

In February, 1976, the seasonally-adjusted jobless rate was seven per cent.

Despite the national trend, the unemployment rate in B.C. dropped to 8.2 per cent, a decline of six-tenths of one per cent from January. There were 103,000 jobless in B.C. in February out of a labor force listed by Statistics Canada at 1,117,000. That compared to 112,000 unemployed in January and 109,000 jobless in February, 1976.

Former NDP labor minister Bill King said today it is significant that while the number of unemployed in B.C. has declined, so has the labor force.

King said that 10,000-person decrease in the labor force for February is the first time since the Second World War that the work force has declined.

"The biggest indicator of real growth in the economy is the growth of the labor force," he said.

B.C. workers, because of frustration and lack of confidence in the economy, have taken their expensive skills to Alberta, King said, where the labor force in February increased by 11,000.

Premier Bill Bennett said he would not comment on monthly statistics but only on employment trends over the period of several months.

Meanwhile in a report released today, the Canadian Council on Social Development warned that the country could be faced with a politically and economically explosive situation if nothing is done to ease severe unemployment among young people.

The jobless rate for men 15 to 24 rose by seven-tenths of one per cent to 14.5 per cent and was up 1.4 per cent to 14.2 per cent for women 15 to 24.

While the unemployment level was well up over February, 1976, the total number of persons with jobs also rose to 9,290,000 from 9,178,000.

But the total of new jobs of 112,000 fell well short of targets for job-creation set by the government in its last budget. Last May, Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said the government hoped the number of jobs would rise by 250,000 in a year.

A new budget is to be brought in on March 31 and Macdonald has said it will be mildly stimulative to expand growth in the economy.

The actual unemployment rate for February, Statistics Canada said, was 9.1 per cent, compared with eight per cent in the same month a year ago.

Unemployment rose chiefly among men aged 25 and over, and both women and men aged 15 to 24. The jobless rate for women 25 and over remained steady at seven per cent.

The jobless rate for men 25 and over rose by three-tenths of one per cent to 4.7 per cent.

Unemployment rates rose in six provinces, with the Atlantic provinces and Manitoba especially hard-hit, while the rates declined in four provinces, mostly in the West.

Newfoundland kept its hold as the province with the worst unemployment, with the rate soaring by 1.5 per cent from January to 15.1 per cent.

Nova Scotia had the second-largest increase in unemployment with the rate there rising by 1.1 per cent to 11 per cent.

MILK GOING UP

An industry-wide two-cent hike in the retail price of milk is forecast by Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt.

Fred Mockford, assistant general manager of Island Farms Dairies in Victoria agreed today with Hewitt's statement that factors in the industry will cause a price hike but said he is unable to predict when it will come.

He said there are too many variables to make exact predictions, but added a two cent per litre price hike in the near future is "fairly definite."

The last price hike was in September, 1976. In Victoria, homo milk retails for about dictions, but added a two-cent litre depending on the store and the quantity purchased.

The amount the dairies pay to the farmers is calculated on a month-to-month basis. Increases are absorbed by the dairy until such time the incent per litre and then the cent per litre and then the hike is passed on to the consumer, Mockford said.

Over the seven months since the last retail price increase, the cost of raw milk to the dairies has gone up, he added.

Wages in the industry are another factor.

Dairy workers in the Fraser Valley dairies receive a six per cent increase April 1.

Vancouver Island contracts run to September, but with the uncertainty of the future of the Anti-Inflation Board regulations, Mockford said he could make no predictions on labor's effect on the price of milk.

Saccharin Ban Leak Sparked Sugar Profits

TORONTO (CP) — News of an impending ban on saccharin was leaked from the office of Health Minister Marc Lalonde several days before a joint Canada-United States announcement of the ban, according to the Toronto Sun.

The newspaper says dozens of speculators who received advance notice of the ban on the artificial sweetener made profits buying sugar company shares and sugar futures, which rose after the announcement.

Sun columnist Morton Shulman says he was a benefactor of the leak and made a few thousand dollars trading on shares of Redpath Sugar, which rose following the announcement to $14.25 from $13.12.

Shulman says he heard of the ban four hours before it was announced last Wednesday.

He says one Toronto businessman who knew of the ban purchased 35 million pounds of sugar on the futures market at 8.7 cents a pound on the morning of the announcement. He says the man resold most of the holdings the following day for 9.2 cents, earning about $175,000.

In Ottawa, Rene Mercier, spokesman for Lalonde, denied allegations that the leak started in Ottawa. He said Lalonde believes the disclosure originated in the U.S.

"The sugar stocks in the U.S. were reacting to rumors as early as the Friday prior to the announcement," he said.

The ban on saccharin was announced after studies linked the sweetener to cancer. After July 1, soft drinks containing saccharin will be removed from Canadian supermarket shelves.

THE NOMINEES

Best Actress nominee Marie-Christine Barrault (Cousin, Cousine) is another newcomer to the North American film audience. She is, however, no stranger to European moviegoers.

Ms. Barrault was born in Paris into a talented family but was not brought up in a theatrical atmosphere. In 1964 she entered the Conservatoire National d'Art Dramatique where she studied acting for two years. Since then she has carved out a successful career for herself in television, theatre and film in Europe. Her films include Pierre Richard's Le Distrait and Eric Rohmer's Ma Nuit Chez Maud.

In the role of Marthe in Jean-Charles Tacchella's Cousin, Cousine, Ms. Barrault gives a profoundly sensitive portrayal of a woman involved in a forbidden love situation.

The competition is stiff in this year's Academy Awards contest and consequently Ms. Barrault's chances of winning appear to be slim at best.

Endure Long Strikes: AIB

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Company presidents must toughen their backbones and resist large wage increases when federal controls end next year, Anti-Inflation Board vice president June Menzies said Monday.

"Companies must be prepared to endure long strikes, if necessary, rather than give in," she said in an interview.

"Otherwise all that has been gained during the three years will be lost."

Companies have been leaning on the AIB regulations rather than learning to be tough, she said.

They have been telling unions: "We would like to give you more but the AIB won't let us."

The time is coming soon when they will have to stiffen their backs and say "No."

Federal Labor Minister John Munro said in Vancouver Monday a joint meeting of government, business and labor leaders will be held in April to discuss termination of controls.

"I can't recall when business and labor have met at the national level before."

Menzies said it is unlikely wage and price controls could be reintroduced once they are dismantled next year.

"People must realize we have beten very lucky with the controls program. There are two things. First, the unions verbally opposed the controls but, in practice, they supported them—better than we could have dared to hope.

"Second, the recession coincided with the controls program. Because of the recession, we are in a good position to stand the shock of exit. In the United States, the economy was still surging when their program ended and all the gains disappeared when the program ended."

The same could happen in Canada, despite the recession, unless companies stand firm and insist that wage increases be linked to higher productivity.

She said the schedule for ending controls is still being debated.

The phase-out could begin on Jan. 2, 1978, with each company emerging from controls at the end of its fiscal year after that date. For most companies, this would mean the end of controls at the end of 1978.

Similarly, unions would come out at the end of their contract after Jan. 2, if the proposal is adopted.

The government is committed to end the controls program in 1978.

The target for inflation at the end of the controls program is four per cent, a goal that may be reached in 1978 if companies and unions cooperate.

Instant Riches Under the Flap In New Lottery

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Coming next in British Columbia is the Instant Lottery, a craze that is sweeping the United States.

It is like Loto Canada or the Provincial, only faster.

And cheaper. At least in theory.

A customer pays 50 cents for a ticket and lifts the flap to find his number. Then he checks it against the numbers under sealed flaps labelled $10 and $100 and $1,000 and $10,000.

Some tickets even offer $50,000 on a 50-cent ticket, the fiscal equivalent of $100,000 for $1, offered by the Express.

If the buyer has a winning number he can get cash that day. If he has a losing ticket, he can buy another one.

And that's where the trouble lies.

A customer planning to buy only one ticket may just miss a big prize. He buys a second and a third. Before he knows it he could be out $20 without a win. money he had not planned to spend when he came into the shop.

The Instant Lottery can be hypnotic, like a slot machine. But just as much fun.

And that's why it is sweeping the country.

In the United States there will be Instant Lotteries before the end of this year every place where lotteries are legal. The Instant Lotteries are drawing all the money-and the steam is going out of the buy-and-wait system.

Instant Lotteries are also coming to Canada, probably starting in Quebec.

In British Columbia the Instant Lottery may be three years away.

"We want to study the effects of the Instant Lottery in other areas before we start one in British Columbia," says John Stewart, director of the B.C. Lotteries Branch.

"We don't want to rush into this thing, although it is certain that Instant Lotteries are on their way. They are extremely popular and they will come to British Columbia within two or three years."

The caution is not only a concern about the social implications of the Instant Lottery.

"There is, in additon, the feeling that we may have more lotteries than we need at the present time," Stewart said.

With Loto Canada and the Provincial four times a year and the dollar Express every two weeks the market is just about saturated.

But there are a number of small lotteries and draws operated by many service clubs and other non-profit organizations doing good work but flooding the lottery market, he said.

When there are too many of these things, people get annoyed, just as they did before the chairty drives merged into the United Appeal.

"Frankly, we would like to see service clubs take up the sale of the Provincial or Western Express tickets rather than run their own raffles — but it is entirely up to them to make their own decision. We feel the public would respond better if there were fewer raffles and a service club could sell the Provincial and the Express as a year-round project and not just once a year."

Lottery tickets earn 10 per cent of the price for the distributor.

All Provincial and Western Express tickets are distributed by the B.C. Lottereis Branch through non-profit organizations. Private enterprise gets into the act only at the retail level.

The government sells the $1 Express ticket to a non-profit organiztion for 80 cents and it in turn sells the ticket to retailers for 90 cents, where they are sold to the public for $1. Retailers are stores, booths or individuals.

The same formula of 10 per cent for everybody applies to the Provincial. The government sells the Provincial tickets to non-pronit groups at $4, who in turn sell them to retailers at $4.50 and the public pays $5. The profit at each step is 50 cents.

Loto Canada works on a private enterprise basis and the commission is just under five per cent.

Hugh Currie and John Howell have the wholesale franchise for Vanocuver Island, operating out of their office at 2340 Douglas. Their only competitors are banks and trust companies which sell the tickets on a national basis.

Currie and Howell buy the tickets from Loto Canda at $9.10 each and sell them to retailers at $9.55 each.

"There isn't a great deal of money in this. You have to have a very high volume to make it pay," Currie said.

"We offer to buy back unsold tickets but we don't get many. Nobody wants to give up a ticket and later discover it was worth a million dollars. Most of the sellers are really gamblers at heart."

The prizes in a lottery are all awarded . . . but sometimes it takes a year.

Unclaimed money must be held in trust for a full 12 months. Then if unclaimed, it goes back into the pot and is distributed as extra prizes.

The percentage of unclaimed prizes is difficult to determine because of the long waiting period but is estimated to be about five per cent. One buyer holding a ticket worth $100,000 has still not claimed his prize in a drawing that took place six months ago. Either he has lost the ticket, forgotten about it or is no hurry for the money.

Loto Canada sells about 50,000 tickets on Vanocuver Island for each draw, about 35,000 through the Currie-Howell shop and the other 15,000 through the banks and trust companies. About 200,000 are sold across the province.

By comparison, the Provincial sells 500,000 tickets in B.C. for each draw.

The big seller is the dollar Express which sells more than one million tickets in B.C. every two weeks.

All three lotteries will continue for at least two years. And then some changes will be made to make way for the Instant Lottery.

They're Coming On Fast

The "instant game" is spreading like wildfire in the U.S. and taking the steam out of the buy - and - wait lottery system.

John Stewart, director of the B.C. Lotteries Branch, is pictured with promotional material for the latest get-rich-quick schemes.

B.C. isn't going to rush into them but Stewart says it's certain they're on their way and they'll cut into conventional lotteries.

TOWN TALK

There's hardly a dull moment at Oak Bay United when Rev. Bill Z. Van Druten takes the pulpit.

The other Sunday, before a packed congregation, the minister cracked jokes, got boffo laughs and announced the birthday of an 86-year-old parishioner (he got a round of applause and a verse of Happy Birthday).

At one point the organist and choir ended their anthem in the middle of a verse, and Van Druten, who loves to sing, had to persuade them to finish it.

Meanwhile, a lady in the pews fainted (there was a doctor in the house), and a number of worshippers could be seen rolling their eyes heavenward.

Yes, Van Druten said, that was a bird they saw fluttering around the timbered vault, but not to worry; it had been living in the church a long time and showed no signs of leaving.

"I should tell you it's a bat, then you'd really worry—we've got bats in our belfry—but don't let that get around. There's people who already think that."

When the big float plane hit the waters of the Inner Harbor Sunday afternoon and suddenly pitched over on one wing bystanders thought they were watching a plane crash.

"It looked like one of their pontoons suddenly collapsed," said Capt. Karol Madera, of the Canadian Armed Forces, who was shore-side with his camera when the plane came down. "I thought they there in trouble."

Not to worry. An Airwest spokesman Monday said that was their plane coming in, and it's supposed to land that way. The plane was a converted Grumman Goose, a McKinnon turboprop flying boat that features retractable wing tip floats, and when it lands it dips over on either one or the other of its wings.

"If it didn't go over then we'd worry," said the Airwest representative.

A group of Victoria high school girls went to Vancouver Friday night to see the English rock group, Queen, but had to make do with seats about 60 feet away from the stage.

The next day they had better luck.

They ere walking through Stanley Park when they spied John Deason, Queen's base guitarist, taking his wife and child to see the polar bears.

They followed at a respectful distance, discreetly taking pictures.

Finally, one of the group, Mary Philip, walked up to him.

"Aren't you John Deacon?" she asked.

He nodded.

"Well," she continued, "we came over from Victoria to watch you perform."

"That's very nice of you," he replied, "and we came over from London to play for you."

Astonishing's the word for the response to that provincial government contest to name the fast ferry service between the North Shore and downtown Vancouver.

The contest—being handled by Victoria's Truman Glover Advertising—has drawn an estimated 100,000 entries.

The winner will get a free lifetime pass on the commuter ferry, will be named an honorary captain of the service and will be invited to attend the inaugural ceremony to kick off the service.

More Money Approved For Centre

Victoria aldermen today recommended the allocation of an additional $94,000 from Victoria West's Neighborhood Improvement Program fund toward the construction of the proposed community centre in Banfield Park.

City council's NIP and housing committee was apparently influenced by arguments that the extra money would protect the flat, usable areas of the park and also save the city money on building maintenance.

Originally $340,000 had been set aside for the project, but the committee chairman Ald. John Hayes explained that the estimate envisaged construction on a level site.

To build the centre on more rocky land unsuitable for park purposes would cost another $8 per square foot or an additional $50,000, he said.

Construction of the bulk of the building in brick, for durability, would increase the price by about another $4 per square foot.

Vic West NIP representative Mrs. Kay Woods told the committee that another 525 square feet was required — making the total area 6,525 square feet — to provide sufficient space for the general activities area.

The extra $94,000 will be taken from the Vic West program's land acquisition fund.

Said Hayes: "I am satisfied that this project should go ahead as quickly as possible."

Book Loss Punishment Ruled Out

Greater Victoria school board Monday defeated a motion by trustee Mark Fisher that would have made schools responsible for replacing stolen library books.

The annual cost for replacing stolen books is about $60,000, but the majority of trustees felt all students would be punished for the actions of a few if each school had to replace books with funds designated for other school activities.

Trustee Daphne Temple asked Fisher why he is concerned only with library books. "Why not art supplies? There's no limit to the witch hunt you could go into."

But Fisher said putting the onus on individual schools to be responsible for their own losses might encourage them to prevent losses.

He questioned the accuracy of the reported losses at individual schools in light of statements made by one school librarian that loss reports may have to be falsified if Fisher's motion passed.

K. W. Adsett, librarian at Oak Bay junior and chairman of the Victoria school librarians association, wrote to the board:

"As Dr. Fisher's motion now stands, it will force the school librarian into the position of preparing false inventory reports to cover this type of loss."

Fisher said at the meeting he was angered by Adsett's suggestion because it intimated retaliation.

"This sounds like a threat," he said.

Trustee Peter Bunn said book loss is simply shoplifting and Fisher's motion would create a situation where others would suffer for the stealing of a few.

He compared it to honest people paying more for goods at retail stores because the stores had to build shoplifting losses into their prices.

A breakdown showed losses ranged from virtually no thefts at one school to an average of almost one book per student at another school last year.

Speeders Zapped Coming or Going

Traffic radar that can get you coming or going is in use by the RCMP on Capital Region highways and it is proving quicker, easier and less intimidating than the hand-held radar gun.

A dashboard-mounted instrument only 10 inches by 2½ inches, the unit registers speed in miles per hour of either an approaching or receding vehicle, whether or not the police car is moving.

Staff Sgt. Les Harper, divisional traffic officer, said the chief advantage of the machine is its manoeuvrability.

He said the CMI Speedgun IV, which clips easily to a patro car dashboard, enables a patrol constable to check traffice speeds and direct his attention to other police work at the same time.

"It has excellent range and can cover an entire detachment area, including places where it is difficult to mount a stationary traffic check point," Harper said.

Earlier types of highway radar, which remain in use, include the side window-mounted cylindrical models resembling a spotlight, and the hand-held sort looking like a big Very pistol when pointed at an oncoming driver.

Both require the operator's patrol car to be stationary, parked at a roadside vantage point with a clear field of view.

On the Speedgun IV, an instant digital readout of a subject vehicle's speed in miles an hour appears on the left side of the instrument, simultanous with the police car's speed shown on the right side of the panel.

The operator can fix the numbers to remain visible by pressing a button, enabling him to make notes of the time, place and speed or to ilustrate to a violator just how fast he was going.

Four of the instruments, which cost about $3,000 each, are circulating among B.C. detachments. One was used about three weeks at Colwood and has move to the Sidney-North Sannich area.

Sgt. Al Tomlins of Sidney said the radar was being used for the first time there since it was obtained by the RCMP last June.

It is "a good manchine," he said, noting there are only a limited number of spots suitable for setting up a conventional radar checkpoint, and these are soon known to regular travellers.

"This gives total mobility because it can be put in any car, marked or unmarked."

He expected the unit would have "quite an impact on the motoring public, especially the driver who is continually abusing the laws."

It would also be effective off the highway in monitoring traffic in the village of Sidney, Tomlins said.

Theoretically, Speedgun IV could also be used aloft, from the RCMP helicopter. Its ability to clock speeds is effective up to 190 m.p.h., with accuracy of one mile an hour when car-mounted.

CAR MAKER BOWS ON JESUS SHOW

NEW YORK — General Motors says it found nothing objectionable in the two-part NBC television drama, Jesus of Nazareth, but the giant automaker bowed to pressure from fundamentalist Protestants and dropped sponsorship of the program.

A GM spokesman said Monday the firm "decided not to exercise its option to sponsor the television special."

NBC said it was trying to line up new sponsorship for the six-hour production scheduled for broadcast on Palm and Easter Sundays.

A national fundamentalist protest began when Rev. John Dekker, pastor of Cub Hill Bible Presbyterian Church of Baltimore, urged listeners on his radio program, In Defence of Truth, to complain to NBC and General Motors of a "misrepresentation of Jesus."

Dekker said he had "never seen the thing," but he launched the appeal because producer Franco Zeffirelli allegedly said of the film, "the public has never wanted to accept Jesus as a man but only as a God."

"We believe that if we're going to have a representation of Christ at Easter, let's have the Christ of Scripture rather than the Christ of Zeffirelli," Dekker said.

Lottery Grant Puts Mennonites In Quandry

KITCHENER, Ont. — The Mennonite Conference of Ontario, which condemns lotteries on moral and religious grounds, has conditionally accepted a $250,000 grant from Wintario.

At a meeting, 140 delegates in attendance accepted the grant after being told rejecting it might delay building of a $3.4-million senior citizen's community centre in Cambridge, Ont.

After five hours of debate, they agreed to take the money on condition that the conference look into ways of repaying it.

The executive of the Mennonite Council, representing 4,500 members, said in a statement distributed at the meeting:

"We see the lottery system exploiting the poor, entrapping gambling addicts and bringing misfortune to some of the winners."

Clayton Cressman, chairman of the board of directors of senior citizens home, said in a statement to delegates he saw no difference between accepting Wintario money and other government funds.

The board has used provincial building and operating grants without "passing judgment on how governments acquire funds (sales taxes, tobacco, liquor, gambling, etc.)."

KIRITSIS FIT FOR TRIAL

INDIANAPOLIS — Anthony Kiritsis is legally sane and competent to stand trial for holding a real eatate executive hostage with a gun wired to his head for 63 hours last month, a court-appointed psychiatrist said Monday. Kiritsis is being held in the abduction of Richard Hall from his Indianapolis office at shotgun point last month.

CKVU Growing...Thanks to Roots

VANCOUVER — CKVU, Vancouver's newest television station, says it is the top-rated station in the city after only six months on the air.

The station has borrowed some muscle from KOMO, the Seattle, Wash, station, the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission and the seven-part series Roots to vault over its competitors and become Vancouver-s most-watched station —for now.

The January-February Neilsen television broadcast index for Vancouver clearly shows CKVU right at the top. Last fall CKVU was at the bottom.

"The place where they grew was Roots," said Ray Peters, president of CHAN-TV, the British Columbia television station that usually occupies top spot.

"The ratings were taken in a two-week period and on seven of the 14 days, Roots was on."

Peters said Monday he would be willing to bet that most of the people who watched CKVU during the Roots shows, actually had their television sets tuned to Channel 4, KOMO.

This would be because the CRTC requires cable companies to carry the signals of Canadian stations when programs are being simultaneously broadcast on United States stations.

KOMO was broadcasting Roots in Seattle, but in Vancouver, cable companies replaced the KOMO signal with CKVU's Roots and CKVU's commercials.

"They got 60 per cent of the audience on the last Sunday Roots was on," said Peters.

"That's over 501,000 people watching. And most of them were watching on KOMO."

CKVU president Daryl Duke would not prediet March ratings but he said he was not planning on being at the bottom again either.

He agreed that Roots had pushed his station to the top, but he argued that Odd Couple, Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman and the Vancouver show had helped.

CKVU will not rest easily at the top of the pile, he said. "Being number one in a competitive market like this is not something you take for granted."

When the Sharks Hit ...'Bloody Nightmare'

Wife visits Harrison in hospital

SYDNEY, Australia — Verdon Harrison and two friends were on a weekend fishing trip when a freighter sliced through their 26-foot cabin cruiser in the darkness.

Harrison, 32, told police the collision in Morton Bay, 10 miles north of Brisbane, cut their boat in half, forcing the three to scramble aboard a splintered icebox.

Two days later the sharks came.

"A coupleof the big ones came in for the kill," he said. "How I escaped I'll never know."

"It was a bloody nightmare."

He said Victor Beaver — the first man attacked — shouted, "Goodbye, mates, this is it," as a 20-foot shark dragged him out to sea.

The shark then lunged at John Hays, ripping off his arm and pulling him from the makeshift raft.

But, said Harrison, Hays struggled back onto the icebox and said, "I gouged his eye out ... He won't be back."

Harrison then tried to apply a tourniquet to Hays' bleeding limb, but the shark struck again, grabbing Hays for a second time.

"I tried to climb into the icebox for safety, but this big bastard tried to climb in with me. Just then my rescuers came along."

A Brisbane hospital spokesman said Harrison was in satisfactory condition and under heavy sedation.

"He had bad bruising under the arms from clinging to the icebox, cuts to the legs from the bites of smaller sharks, and was suffering from exposure," the spkesman said.

This Charlie Brown Just Didn't Give Up

NEW YORK — Perhaps he had just finished reading Charles Schulz's The Unsinkable Charlie Brown.

According to police, Charles Brown, 27, of Manhattan made three attempts to rob a bank Monday and failed each time.

"He just wouldn't quit," a police department spokesman said.

It began at 11:30 a.m., when the weaponless suspect allegedly strolled in to a branch of the Chemical Bank and handed the teller a note demanding $1,500.

"The teller told him she didn't have that much," the spokesman said. Brown quietly picked up his note and left, he said.

The suspect decided to try his luck again, police said.

At 1:10 p.m., he entered a European-American Bank branch and slipped his note to the teller, "but she got excited and dropped to the floor," according to police.

Brown snatched back his note and left.

Undaunted, Brown allegedly moved down the street to a Citibank branch.

"This time he had a little luck. He got $700," the spokesman said.

But as Brown left the bank, two employees followed him and tackled him on the street, according to police.

Brown was turned over to the FBI and was to be charged with attempted bank robbery.

Shooting Victim

CHICAGO (AP) — Leon Hillard, a dribbling specialist for a number of years with the Harlem Globetrotters basketball team, was shot and killed at his home Monday night, police said. Hillard, 45, was shot in the back of the head.

Police said Hillard's wife, Sandra, 28, was being questioned in connection with the shooting.

Don't Stuff Granny In the Boot

MUNICH — If grandma dies while the family is soaking up the sun on Spain's Costa del Sol this summer, do not stuff her in the car trunk to get her home.

The West German Automobile Club says this happened several times recently, when family members had no idea where to turn for help.

"It is forbidden to transport a corpse in one's own car trunk and a heavy fine results if one is caught at it," the club said.

They suggested that Germans who find themselves in such a situation contact the nearest West German consulate.

Tea at Empress . . .

Taste of Freedom

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Tea at the Empress.

Small tables in the foyer. Large white linen cloths. Shiny silver service and big pots of tea, each spouting steamy wraiths of scent from India, China and Ceylon.

It's a 3 p.m. ritual, as fixed an event as the changing of the guard at Buckingham Palace or the tolling of Big Ben.

It is one of the better kept traditions of our colonial heritage. An oasis of gentle calm, an institution most Victorians, if they think about it at all, take for granted.

Over in the corner by the fireplace is a long table set for 25 people. At first glance it looks oddly out of place amidst the small individual tables and wingback chairs.

Almost all the places at the big table are taken. The people there sit upright and still and they speak softly.

Then you notice the wheelchairs. Thirteen of them.

Tea today at the Empress is for the crippled, the lame and the handicapped.

They do not take it for granted. They have looked forward to this event for days, weeks. For some of them, it is an event that frees them — if only for a few hours — from an institutional routine.

For a brief spell, they are part of the elegant atmosphere of one of Western Canada's most famous rituals.

Francis T. Jones, born in London in 1893, sits with his back to the big front windows. Nearby is his wife, Kate, her full grey hair carefully arranged, framing bright eyes that seem to look over his head from across the linen.

Beside her is Ontario-born Mrs. Susan Smith, who once stayed at the Empress more than 20 years ago.

All three now live at Memorial Pavilion, where they are well cared for, but where outings depend on friends with cars or sturdy arms and legs for wheelchair walks.

They are here today because of the Victoria Society for the Recreation of Handicapped Persons, which provides the young volunteers for escorts and special buses for wheelchair passengers.

Most of the other guests are from Gorge Road Hospital.

The Jones have been married for more than 45 years, and unlike some in their circumstances they are still able to be together — almost. He lives in Memorial's men's section, his wife in separate quarters at the pavilion.

He has lost most of the use of his legs, having been blown up at Etampes, France, in 1918. The nerves were affected and he spent two years in an army hospital. Now arthritis has set in.

"I get about a little on my two sticks," he says.

They might have held out on their own a little longer, but, Frank explains, his wife had a stroke.

And she is blind.

"He comes up and sees me every day," says Kate, and asks Frank if her tea has arrived.

Is it sometimes boring at the hospital? Do they tire of the basketry, the doll-making, the card games?

"Well, yes, but we make the best of it," Frank replies.

Kate reads some Braille. She used to get talking books when she was able to visit the Canadian National Institute for the Blind but since being confined to a wheelchair, it is no longer convenient.

"Except for a bit of arthritis, I maintain fairly decent health," Frank says with a touch of pride.

The tea has arrived, poured carefully by an attentive waitress who heaps before them hot buttered crumpets, chicken, ham and cheese sandwiches with the crusts removed, and iced white layer cake.

Most of the fruit salad has disappeared. The rest soon follows.

Peter Menzies and Suzanne Simard are in charge of the group.

They enjoy the tea with their wheelchair friends and are looking forward to the next assignment.

"The Jones are great fun," says Peter.

"I think we'll have too make this a regular feature," says Suzanne. Everyone likes it.

But there's a problem. Organizing events like the Empress affair takes money. And money is hard to come by for the people who work for the society.

That's where you come in.

The Times this month, in co-operation with CJVI, is sponsoring a campaign for operating funds for the recreation society.

Based in a storefront office at 2535 Government, the society has a staff of eight and is helped by about 80 volunteers.

It conducts 17 recreation programs for handicapped children, teenagers and adults, serving about 200 each month.

But government grants which have provided most of the financing have nearly expired.

HUGHES WAS ONLY WORTH $168 MILLION

LAS VEGAS (UPI) — Howard Hughes left an estate worth $168,834,165, far less than generally believed, according to documents filed Tuesday with the Nevada District Court.

The worth of the late industrialist's estate was declared in papers filed by Attorney William Morse with the Clark County clerk's office on the March 15 deadline.

It was the first actual public declaration of Hughes' estate which had been estimated in newspapers and magazine stories at from $2.5 billion to more than $4 billion.

Hijacker Heads For Turin

ZURICH (UPI) — Italian auto mechanic Luciano Porcari, who hijacked a Spanish airliner to Africa and back to Europe, ordered the plane to return to Turin, Italy, tonight after six dramatic hours at Zurich airport.

Swiss police at Zurich airport said the Iberian airlines Boeing 727 left at 7.19 p.m. (10.19 a.m. PST).

Porcari said he was taking it to Turin where he had been earlier today.

Porcari, who hijacked the plane Monday with 37 persons on board, freed 14 hostages today in stops at Turin and Zurich.

He had recovered a 3-year-old daughter in Abidjan, Ivory Coast and tried futilely to see another daughter in Turin.

Earlier today the hijacker had forced the Iberia airlines plane to fly from Turin to Zurich. When Swiss officials initially refused to refuel the plane he ordered it to take off again but it returned to Zurich in half an hour.

When the plane headed back for Turin tonight there were 15 passengers and 7 crew members on the aircraft, plus Porcari and his 3-year-old illegitimate daugh-

932,000 OUT OF WORK

Jobless Spirals To 19-Year High

OTTAWA (CP) — Unemployment in February soared to a new high of 932,000 actual jobless, compared with 800,000 a year ago, Statistics Canada reported today.

The unemployment rate, adjusted for seasonal factors, jumped substantially to 7.9 per cent, equalling the worst monthly level on record back in June, 1958.

February is the first month ever recorded by Statistics Canada in which the number of jobless exceeded 900,000. The figures are sure to prompt renewed calls upon the government to do something about worsening unemployment.

The agency began collecting job statistics in 1953.

In January, the actual total of unemployed was 889,000 and the seasonally-adjusted jobless rate, which is used to predict trends in the labor force, was 7.5 per cent.

In February, 1976, the seasonally-adjusted jobless rate was seven per cent.

Despite the national trend, the unemployment rate in B.C. dropped to 8.2 per cent, a decline of six-tenths of one per cent from January. There were 103,000 jobless in B.C. in February out of a labor force listed by Statistics Canada at 1,117,000. That compared to 112,000 unemployed in January and 109,000 jobless in February, 1976.

Former NDP labor minister Bill King said today it is significant that while the number of unemployed in B.C. has declined, so has the labor force.

King said that 10,000-person decrease in the labor force for February is the first time since the Second World War that the work force has declined.

"The biggest indicator of real growth in the economy is the growth of the labor force," he said.

B.C. workers, because of frustration and lack of confidence in the economy, have taken their expensive skills to Alberta, King said, where the labor force in February increased by 11,000.

Premier Bill Bennett said he would not comment on monthly statistics but only on employment trends over the period of several months.

Meanwhile in a report released today, the Canadian Council on Social Development warned that the country could be faced with a politically and economically explosive situation if nothing is done to ease severe unemployment among young people.

The jobless rate for men 15 to 24 rose by seven-tenths of one per cent to 14.5 per cent and was up 1.4 per cent to 14.2 per cent for women 15 to 24.

While the unemployment level was well up over February, 1976, the total number of persons with jobs also rose to 9,290,000 from 9,178,000.

But the total of new jobs of 112,000 fell well short of targets for job-creation set by the government in its last budget. Last May, Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said the government hoped the number of jobs would rise by 250,000 in a year.

A new budget is to be brought in on March 31 and Macdonald has said it will be mildly stimulative to expand growth in the economy.

The actual unemployment rate for February, Statistics Canada said, was 9.1 per cent, compared with eight per cent in the same month a year ago.

Unemployment rose chiefly among men aged 25 and over, and both women and men aged 15 to 24. The jobless rate for women 25 and over remained steady at seven per cent.

The jobless rate for men 25 and over rose by three-tenths of one per cent to 4.7 per cent.

Unemployment rates rose in six provinces, with the Atlantic provinces and Manitoba especially hard-hit, while the rates declined in four provinces, mostly in the West.

Newfoundland kept its hold as the province with the worst unemployment, with the rate soaring by 1.5 per cent from January to 15.1 per cent.

Nova Scotia had the second-largest increase in unemployment with the rate there rising by 1.1 per cent to 11 per cent.

MILK GOING UP

An industry-wide two-cent hike in the retail price of milk is forecast by Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt.

Fred Mockford, assistant general manager of Island Farms Dairies in Victoria agreed today with Hewitt's statement that factors in the industry will cause a price hike but said he is unable to predict when it will come.

He said there are too many variables to make exact predictions, but added a two cent per litre price hike in the near future is "fairly definite."

The last price hike was in September, 1976. In Victoria, homo milk retails for about dictions, but added a two-cent litre depending on the store and the quantity purchased.

The amount the dairies pay to the farmers is calculated on a month-to-month basis. Increases are absorbed by the dairy until such time the incent per litre and then the cent per litre and then the hike is passed on to the consumer, Mockford said.

Over the seven months since the last retail price increase, the cost of raw milk to the dairies has gone up, he added.

Wages in the industry are another factor.

Dairy workers in the Fraser Valley dairies receive a six per cent increase April 1.

Vancouver Island contracts run to September, but with the uncertainty of the future of the Anti-Inflation Board regulations, Mockford said he could make no predictions on labor's effect on the price of milk.

Saccharin Ban Leak Sparked Sugar Profits

TORONTO (CP) — News of an impending ban on saccharin was leaked from the office of Health Minister Marc Lalonde several days before a joint Canada-United States announcement of the ban, according to the Toronto Sun.

The newspaper says dozens of speculators who received advance notice of the ban on the artificial sweetener made profits buying sugar company shares and sugar futures, which rose after the announcement.

Sun columnist Morton Shulman says he was a benefactor of the leak and made a few thousand dollars trading on shares of Redpath Sugar, which rose following the announcement to $14.25 from $13.12.

Shulman says he heard of the ban four hours before it was announced last Wednesday.

He says one Toronto businessman who knew of the ban purchased 35 million pounds of sugar on the futures market at 8.7 cents a pound on the morning of the announcement. He says the man resold most of the holdings the following day for 9.2 cents, earning about $175,000.

In Ottawa, Rene Mercier, spokesman for Lalonde, denied allegations that the leak started in Ottawa. He said Lalonde believes the disclosure originated in the U.S.

"The sugar stocks in the U.S. were reacting to rumors as early as the Friday prior to the announcement," he said.

The ban on saccharin was announced after studies linked the sweetener to cancer. After July 1, soft drinks containing saccharin will be removed from Canadian supermarket shelves.

THE NOMINEES

Eleanor Hendriks Witmer

Best Actress nominee Marie-Christine Barrault (Cousin, Cousine) is another newcomer to the North American film audience. She is, however, no stranger to European moviegoers.

Ms. Barrault was born in Paris into a talented family but was not brought up in a theatrical atmosphere. In 1964 she entered the Conservatoire National d'Art Dramatique where she studied acting for two years. Since then she has carved out a successful career for herself in television, theatre and film in Europe. Her films include Pierre Richard's Le Distrait and Eric Rohmer's Ma Nuit Chez Maud.

In the role of Marthe in Jean-Charles Tacchella's Cousin, Cousine, Ms. Barrault gives a profoundly sensitive portrayal of a woman involved in a forbidden love situation.

The competition is stiff in this year's Academy Awards contest and consequently Ms. Barrault's chances of winning appear to be slim at best.

Endure Long Strikes: AIB

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Company presidents must toughen their backbones and resist large wage increases when federal controls end next year, Anti-Inflation Board vice president June Menzies said Monday.

"Companies must be prepared to endure long strikes, if necessary, rather than give in," she said in an interview.

"Otherwise all that has been gained during the three years will be lost."

Companies have been leaning on the AIB regulations rather than learning to be tough, she said.

They have been telling unions: "We would like to give you more but the AIB won't let us."

The time is coming soon when they will have to stiffen their backs and say "No."

Federal Labor Minister John Munro said in Vancouver Monday a joint meeting of government, business and labor leaders will be held in April to discuss termination of controls.

"I can't recall when business and labor have met at the national level before."

Menzies said it is unlikely wage and price controls could be reintroduced once they are dismantled next year.

"People must realize we have beten very lucky with the controls program. There are two things. First, the unions verbally opposed the controls but, in practice, they supported them—better tharf we could have dared to hope.

"Second, the recession coincided with the controls program. Because of the recession, we are in a good position to stand the shook of exit. In the United States, the economy was still surging when their program ended and all the gains disappeared when the program ended."

The same could happen in Canada, despite the recession, unless companies stand firm and insist that wage increases be linked to higher productivity.

She said the schedule for ending controls is still being debated.

The phase-out could begin on Jan. 2, 1978, with each company emerging from controls at the end of its fiscal year after that date. For most companies, this would mean the end of controls at the end of 1978.

Similarly, unions would come out at the end of their contract after Jan. 2, if the proposal is adopted.

The government is committed to end the controls program in 1978.

The target for inflation at the end of the controls program is four per cent, a goal that may be reached in 1978 if companies and unions cooperate.

Instant Riches Under the Flap In New Lottery

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Coming next in British Columbia is the Instant Lottery, a craze that is sweeping the United States.

It is like Loto Canada or the Provincial, only faster.

And cheaper. At least in theory.

A customer pays 50 cents for a ticket and lifts the flap to find his number. Then he checks it against the numbers under sealed flaps labelled $10 and $100 and $1,000 and $10,000.

Some tickets even offer $50,000 on a 50-cent ticket, the fiscal equivalent of $100,000 for $1, offered by the Express.

If the buyer has a winning number he can get cash that day. If he has a losing ticket, he can buy another one.

And that's where the trouble lies.

A customer planning to buy only one ticket may just miss a big prize. He buys a second and a third. Before he knows it he could be out $20 without a win. money he had not planned to spend when he came into the shop.

The Instant Lottery can be hypnotic, like a slot machine. But just as much fun.

And that's why it is sweeping the country.

In the United States there will be Instant Lotteries before the end of this year every place where lotteries are legal. The Instant Lotteries are drawing all the money-and the steam is going out of the buy-and-wait system.

Instant Lotteries are also coming to Canada, probably starting in Quebec.

In British Columbia the Instant Lottery may be three years away.

"We want to study the effects of the Instant Lottery in other areas before we start one in British Columbia," says John Stewart, director of the B.C. Lotteries Branch.

"We don't want to rush into this thing, although it is certain that Instant Lottereis are on their way. They are extremely popular and they will come to British Columbia within two or three years."

The caution is not only a concern about the social implications of the Instant Lottery.

"There is, in additon, the feeling that we may have more lotteries than we need at the present time," Stewart said.

With Loto Canada and the Provincial four times a year and the dollar Express every two weeks the market is just about saturated.

But there are a number of small lotteries and draws operated by many service clubs and other non-profit organizations doing good work but flooding the lottery market, he said.

When there are too many of these things, people get annoyed, just as they did before the chairty drives merged into the United Appeal.

"Frankly, we would like to see service clubs take up the sale of the Provincial or Western Express tickets rather than run their own raffles — but it is entirely up to them to make their own decision. We feel the public would respond better if there were fewer raffles and a service club could sell the Provincial and the Express as a year-round project and not just once a year."

Lottery tickets earn 10 per cent of the price for the distributor.

All Provincial and Western Express tickets are distributed by the B.C. Lottereis Branch through non-profit organizations. Private enterprise gets into the act only at the retail level.

The government sells the $1 Express ticket to a non-profit organiztion for 80 cents and it in turn sells the ticket to retailers for 90 cents, where they are sold to the public for $1. Retailers are stores, booths or individuals.

The same formula of 10 per cent for everybody applies to the Provincial. The government sells the Provincial tickets to non-pronit groups at $4, who in turn sell them to retailers at $4.50 and the public pays $5. The profit at each step is 50 cents.

Loto Canada works on a private enterprise basis and the commission is just under five per cent.

Hugh Currie and John Howell have the wholesale franchise for Vanocuver Island, operating out of their office at 2340 Douglas. Their only competitors are banks and trust companies which sell the tickets on a national basis.

Currie and Howell buy the tickets from Loto Canda at $9.10 each and sell them to retailers at $9.55 each.

"There isn't a great deal of money in this. You have to have a very high volume to make it pay," Currie said.

"We offer to buy back unsold tickets but we don't get many. Nobody wants to give up a ticket and later discover it was worth a million dollars. Most of the sellers are really gamblers at heart."

The prizes in a lottery are all awarded . . . but sometimes it takes a year.

Unclaimed money must be held in trust for a full 12 months. Then if unclaimed, it goes back into the pot and is distributed as extra prizes.

The percentage of unclaimed prizes is difficult to determine because of the long waiting period but is estimated to be about five per cent. One buyer holding a ticket worth $100,000 has still not claimed his prize in a drawing that took place six months ago. Either he has lost the ticket, forgotten about it or is no hurry for the money.

Loto Canada sells about 50,000 tickets on Vanocuver Island for each draw, about 35,000 through the Currie-Howell shop and the other 15,000 through the banks and trust companies. About 200,000 are sold across the province.

By comparison, the Provincial sells 500,000 tickets in B.C. for each draw.

The big seller is the dollar Express which sells more than one million tickets in B.C. every two weeks.

All three lotteries will continue for at least two years. And then some changes will be made to make way for the Instant Lottery.

They're Coming On Fast

The "instant game" is spreading like wildfire in the U.S. and taking the steam out of the buy-and-wait lottery system.

John Stewart, director of the B.C. Lotteries Branch, is pictured with promotional material for the latest get-rich-quick schemes.

B.C. isn't going to rush into them but Stewart says it's certain they're on their way and they'll cut into conventional lotteries.

TOWN TALK

There's hardly a dull moment at Oak Bay United when Rev. Bill Z. Van Druten takes the pulpit.

The other Sunday, before a packed congregation, the minister cracked jokes, got boffo laughs and announced the birthday of an 86-year-old parishioner (he got a round of applause and a verse of Happy Birthday).

At one point the organist and choir ended their anthem in the middle of a verse, and Van Druten, who loves to sing, had to persuade them to finish it.

Meanwhile, a lady in the pews fainted (there was a doctor in the house), and a number of worshippers could be seen rolling their eyes heavenward.

Yes, Van Druten said, that was a bird they saw fluttering around the timbered vault, but not to worry; it had been living in the church a long time and showed no signs of leaving.

"I should tell you it's a bat, then you'd really worry—we've got bats in our belfry—but don't let that get around. There's people who already think that."

When the big float plane hit the waters of the Inner Harbor Sunday afternoon and suddenly pitched over on one wing bystanders thought they were watching a plane crash.

"It looked like one of their pontoons suddenly collapsed," said Capt. Karol Madera, of the Canadian Armed Forces, who was shore-side with his camera when the plane came down. "I thought they there in trouble."

Not to worry. An Airwest spokesman Monday said that was their plane coming in, and it's supposed to land that way. The plane was a converted Grumman Goose, a McKinnon turboprop flying boat that features retractable wing tip floats, and when it lands it dips over on either one or the other of its wings.

"If it didn't go over then we'd worry," said the Airwest representative.

The next day they had better luck.

They ere walking through Stanley Park when they spied John Deason, Queen's base guitarist, taking his wife and child to see the polar bears.

They followed at a respectful distance, discreetly taking pictures.

Finally, one of the group, Mary Philip, walked up to him.

"Aren't you John Deacon?" she asked.

He nodded.

"Well," she continued, "we came over from Victoria to watch you perform."

"That's very nice of you," he replied, "and we came over from London to play for you."

Astonishing's the word for the response to that provincial government contest to name the fast ferry service between the North Shore and downtown Vancouver.

The contest—being handled by Victoria's Truman Glover Advertising—has drawn an estimated 100,000 entries.

The winner will get a free lifetime pass on the commuter ferry, will be named an honorary captain of the service and will be invited to attend the inaugural ceremony to kick off the service.

More Money Approved For Centre

Victoria aldermen today recommended the allocation of an additional $94,000 from Victoria West's Neighborhood Improvement Program fund toward the construction of the proposed community centre in Banfield Park.

City council's NIP and housing committee was apparently influenced by arguments that the extra money would protect the flat, usable areas of the park and also save the city money on building maintenance.

Originally $340,000 had been set aside for the project, but the committee chairman Ald. John Hayes explained that the estimate envisaged construction on a level site.

To build the centre on more rocky land unsuitable for park purposes would cost another $8 per square foot or an additional $50,000, he said.

Construction of the bulk of the building in brick, for durability, would increase the price by about another $4 per square foot.

Vic West NIP representative Mrs. Kay Woods told the committee that another 525 square feet was required — making the total area 6,525 square feet — to provide sufficient space for the general activities area.

The extra $94,000 will be taken from the Vic West program's land acquisition fund.

Said Hayes: "I am satisfied that this project should go ahead as quickly as possible."

Book Loss Punishment Ruled Out

Greater Victoria school board Monday defeated a motion by trustee Mark Fisher that would have made schools responsible for replacing stolen library books.

The annual cost for replacing stolen books is about $60,000, but the majority of trustees felt all students would be punished for the actions of a few if each school had to replace books with funds designated for other school activities.

Trustee Daphne Temple asked Fisher why he is concerned only with library books. "Why not art supplies? There's no limit to the witch hunt you could go into."

But Fisher said putting the onus on individual schools to be responsible for their own losses might encourage them to prevent losses.

He questioned the accuracy of the reported losses at individual schools in light of statements made by one school librarian that loss reports may have to be falsified if Fisher's motion passed.

K. W. Adsett, librarian at Oak Bay junior and chairman of the Victoria school librarians association, wrote to the board:

"As Dr. Fisher's motion now stands, it will force the school librarian into the position of preparing false inventory reports to cover this type of loss."

Fisher said at the meeting he was angered by Adsett's suggestion because it intimated retaliation.

"This sounds like a threat," he said.

Trustee Peter Bunn said book loss is simply shoplifting and Fisher's motion would create a situation where others would suffer for the stealing of a few.

He compared it to honest people paying more for goods at retail stores because the stores had to build shoplifting losses into their prices.

A breakdown showed losses ranged from virtually no thefts at one school to an average of almost one book per student at another school last year.

Speeders Zapped Coming or Going

Traffic radar that can get you coming or going is in use by the RCMP on Capital Region highways and it is proving quicker, easier and less intimidating than the hand-held radar gun.

A dashboard-mounted instrument only 10 inches by 2½ inches, the unit registers speed in miles per hour of either an approaching or receding vehicle, whether or not the police car is moving.

Staff Sgt. Les Harper, divisional traffic officer, said the chief advantage of the machine is its manoeuvrability.

He said the CMI Speedgun IV, which clips easily to a patro car dashboard, enables a patrol constable to check traffice speeds and direct his attention to other police work at the same time.

"It has excellent range and can cover an entire detachment area, including places where it is difficult to mount a stationary traffic check point," Harper said.

Earlier types of highway radar, which remain in use, include the side window-mounted cylindrical models resembling a spotlight, and the hand-held sort looking like a big Very pistol when pointed at an oncoming driver.

Both require the operator's patrol car to be stationary, parked at a roadside vantage point with a clear field of view.

On the Speedgun IV, an instant digital readout of a subject vehicle's speed in miles an hour appears on the left side of the instrument, simultanous with the police car's speed shown on the right side of the panel.

The operator can fix the numbers to remain visible by pressing a button, enabling him to make notes of the time, place and speed or to illustrate to a violator just how fast he was going.

Four of the instruments, which cost about $3,000 each, are circulating among B.C. detachments. One was used about three weeks at Colwood and has move to the Sidney-North Sannich area.

Sgt. Al Tomlins of Sidney said the radar was being used for the first time there since it was obtained by the RCMP last June.

It is "a good manchine," he said, noting there are only a limited number of spots suitable for setting up a conventional radar checkpoint, and these are soon known to regular travellers.

"This gives total mobility because it can be put in any car, marked or unmarked."

He expected the unit would have "quite an impact on the motoring public, especially the driver who is continually abusing the laws."

It would also be effective off the highway in monitoring traffic in the village of Sidney, Tomlins said.

Theoretically, Speedgun IV could also be used aloft, from the RCMP helicopter. Its ability to clock speeds is effective up to 190 m.p.h., with accuracy of one mile an hour when car-mounted.

CAR MAKER BOWS ON JESUS SHOW

NEW YORK — General Motors says it found nothing objectionable in the two-part NBC television drama, Jesus of Nazareth, but the giant automaker bowed to pressure from fundamentalist Protestants and dropped sponsorship of the program.

A GM spokesman said Monday the firm "decided not to exercise its option to sponsor the television special."

NBC said it was trying to line up new sponsorship for the six-hour production scheduled for broadcast on Palm and Easter Sundays.

A national fundamentalist protest began when Rev. John Dekker, pastor of Cub Hill Bible Presbyterian Church of Baltimore, urged listeners on his radio program, In Defence of Truth, to complain to NBC and General Motors of a "misrepresentation of Jesus."

Dekker said he had "never seen the thing," but he launched the appeal because producer Franco Zeffirelli allegedly said of the film, "the public has never wanted to accept Jesus as a man but only as a God."

"We believe that if we're going to have a representation of Christ at Easter, let's have the Christ of Scripture rather than the Christ of Zeffirelli," Dekker said.

Lottery Grant Puts Mennonites In Quandry

KITCHENER, Ont. — The Mennonite Conference of Ontario, which condemns lotteries on moral and religious grounds, has conditionally accepted a $250,000 grant from Wintario.

At a meeting, 140 delegates in attendance accepted the grant after being told rejecting it might delay building of a $3.4-million senior citizen's community centre in Cambridge, Ont.

After five hours of debate, they agreed to take the money on condition that the conference look into ways of repaying it.

The executive of the Mennonite Council, representing 4,500 members, said in a statement distributed at the meeting:

"We see the lottery system exploiting the poor, entrapping gambling addicts and bringing misfortune to some of the winners."

Clayton Cressman, chairman of the board of directors of senior citizens home, said in a statement to delegates he saw no difference between accepting Wintario money and other government funds.

The board has used provincial building and operating grants without "passing judgment on how governments acquire funds (sales taxes, tobacco, liquor, gambling, etc.)."

CKVU Growing...Thanks to Roots

VANCOUVER — CKVU, Vancouver's newest television station, says it is the top-rated station in the city after only six months on the air.

The station has borrowed some muscle from KOMO, the Seattle, Wash. station, the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission and the seven-part series Roots to vault over its competitors and become Vancouver-s most-watched station —for now.

The January-February Neilsen television broadcast index for Vancouver clearly shows CKVU right at the top. Last fall CKVU was at the bottom.

"The place where they grew was Roots," said Ray Peters, president of CHAN-TV, the British Columbia television station that usually occupies top spot.

"The ratings were taken in a two-week period and on seven of the 14 days, Roots was on."

Peters said Monday he would be willing to bet that most of the people who watched CKVU during the Roots shows, actually had their television sets tuned to Channel 4, KOMO.

This would be because the CRTC requires cable companies to carry the signals of Canadian stations when programs are being simultaneously broadcast on United States stations.

KOMO was broadcasting Roots in Seattle, but in Vancouver, cable companies replaced the KOMO signal with CKVU's Roots and CKVU's commercials.

"They got 60 per cent of the audience on the last Sunday Roots was on," said Peters.

"That's over 501,000 people watching. And most of them were watching on KOMO."

CKVU president Daryl Duke would not predict March ratings but he said he was not planning on being at the bottom again either.

He agreed that Roots had pushed his station to the top, but he argued that Odd Couple, Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman and the Vancouver show had helped.

CKVU will not rest easily at the top of the pile, he said. "Being number one in a competitive market like this is not something you take for granted."

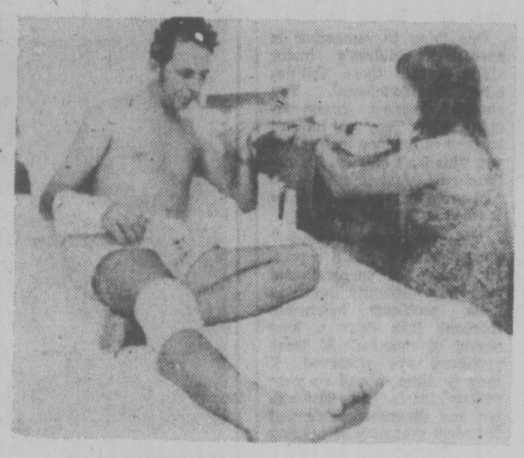
When the Sharks Hit ...'Bloody Nightmare'



Wife visits Harrison in hospital

SYDNEY, Australia — Verdon Harrison and two friends were on a weekend fishing trip when a freighter sliced through their 26-foot cabin cruiser in the darkness.

Harrison, 32, told police the collision in Morton Bay, 10 miles north of Brisbane, cut their boat in half, forcing the three to scramble aboard a splintered icebox.

Two days later the sharks came.

"A coupleof the big ones came in for the kill," he said. "How I escaped I'll never know."

"It was a bloody nightmare."

He said Victor Beaver — the first man attacked — shouted, "Goodbye, mates, this is it," as a 20-foot shark dragged him out to sea.

The shark then lunged at John Hays, ripping off his arm and pulling him from the makeshift raft.

But, said Harrison, Hays struggled back onto the icebox and said, "I gouged his eye out ... He won't be back."

Harrison then tried to apply a tourniquet to Hays' bleeding limb, but the shark struck again, grabbing Hays for a second time.

"I tried to climb into the icebox for safety, but this big bastard tried to climb in with me. Just then my rescuers came along."

A Brisbane hospital spokesman said Harrison was in satisfactory condition and under heavy sedation.

"He had bad bruising under the arms from clinging to the icebox, cuts to the legs from the bites of smaller sharks, and was suffering from exposure," the spkesman said.

This Charlie Brown Just Didn't Give Up

NEW YORK — Perhaps he had just finished reading Charles Schulz's The Unsinkable Charlie Brown.

According to police, Charles Brown, 27, of Manhattan made three attempts to rob a bank Monday and failed each time.

"He just wouldn't quit," a police department spokesman said.

It began at 11:30 a.m., when the weaponless suspect allegedly strolled in to a branch of the Chemical Bank and handed the teller a note demanding $1,500.

"The teller told him she didn't have that much," the spokesman said. Brown quietly picked up his note and left, he said.

The suspect decided to try his luck again, police said.

At 1:10 p.m., he entered a European-American Bank branch and slipped his note to the teller, "but she got excited and dropped to the floor," according to police.

Brown snatched back his note and left.

Undaunted, Brown allegedly moved down the street to a Citibank branch.

"This time he had a little luck. He got $700," the spokesman said.

But as Brown left the bank, two employees followed him and tackled him on the street, according to police.

Brown was turned over to the FBI and was to be charged with attempted bank robbery.

Shooting Victim

CHICAGO (AP) — Leon Hillard, a dribbling specialist for a number of years with the Harlem Globetrotters basketball team, was shot and killed at his home Monday night, police said. Hillard, 45, was shot in the back of the head.

Police said Hillard's wife, Sandra, 28, was being questioned in connection with the shooting.

Don't Stuff Granny In the Boot

MUNICH — If grandma dies while the family is soaking up the sun on Spain's Costa del Sol this summer, do not stuff her in the car trunk to get her home.

The West German Automobile Club says this happened several times recently, when family members had no idea where to turn for help.

"It is forbidden to transport a corpse in one's own car trunk and a heavy fine results if one is caught at it," the club said.

They suggested that Germans who find themselves in such a situation contact the nearest West German consulate.
